THE THIRTY-FIFTH SEASON
NINETEEN HUNDRED TWENTY

G.A.C.

You can have a Pop Concert at Home
any Evening with

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

THE HUNGARIAN DANCES OF BRAHMS

In the early spring of 1853, a youthful Hungarian exile and violinist extraordinary, Edward Remenyi, found himself the idol of Hamburg society. In response to his inquiry for an accompanist, a youth of twenty knocked at the door of his rooms, and introduced himself as Johannes Brahms. In the course of the evening, Brahms played one of his piano sonatas for his new friend. "My dear Brahms," exclaimed Remenyi, enraptured, "you are a genius!" "I wish the good people of Hamburg thought so," replied Brahms, with his melancholy smile. They did not leave the piano until four in the morning. Rehearsals and engagements were forgotten. When Remenyi presented his "discovery" to the Hamburgers, the Hamburgers, bored, dropped them both. Undaunted, Remenyi suggested a joint tour, which they immediately undertook. Writing their own announcements, they journeyed from town to town with varying success, sometimes reaping as little as five dollars at a concert. Thus they paid their way to Weimar and the shrine of Liszt. That master was struck by the lad's music. But while Liszt was playing, Brahms was caught dozing—an unpardonable offence. After this friction he felt constrained to leave, nor did his path ever cross Remenyi's again. This is hardly surprising, for the reticent, sensitive composer and the rather worldly violin virtuoso must have made an incongruous pair. Brahms carried with him to Hanover a letter of introduction to Joachim, the great violinist, and Joachim introduced him in turn to Robert Schumann. Both of these musicians became his lifelong friends. Schumann in the following October proclaimed to the world in print that he had found a veritable genius. Thus did the "gypsy" violinist help Brahms to fame while providing him with some valuable thematic material, for the themes of the Hungarian Dances were undoubtedly revealed to Brahms on that memorable tour, when Remenyi played several popular Hungarian Czardas at each concert. Of course, Brahms's treatment of the themes was an integral part of their success.

TSCHAIKOWSKY AND MME. VON MECK

Tschaikowsky's dedication of his Fourth Symphony "To my Best Friend" refers to Madame von Meck, a widow of large fortune with whom the composer had a remarkable relationship. As a patroness of music she corresponded with him, and, learning of his financial straits, arranged to send him a yearly sum of six thousand roubles, tactfully insisting that they should never meet. Through thirteen years of intimate friendship they never spoke. Once they encountered accidentally in a grove of her estate, whereupon Tschaikowsky lifted his hat and fled. By letter he became her intimate confidant. Earnestly he consecrated this symphony to her, informing her minutely of its progress as he composed it. "My dear Nadejda Filaretovna," he wrote, "it seems to me that this symphony is the best I have yet made. How glad I am that it is our work, and that you will know when you hear it how much I thought of you in every measure!" And after she had heard its first performance in Moscow, Tschaikowsky wrote from Florence: "I was in thought with you at the concert hall. I had calculated to the minute when the fate theme* would be sounded, and I then endeavored, following all the detail, to imagine what sort of impression the music would make." Mme. von Meck wrote in December, 1890, that she faced bankruptcy, and would have to discontinue the allowance. The letter caused a cruel misunderstanding. "Do you really think me incapable of remembering you, now that I no longer receive your money?" Tschaikowsky answered. For a while he was too wounded to make any further advance. When he did, there was no response. As fate had it, this long friendship was terminated only three years before the composer's death. And she learned the news on her own deathbed.

* The Finale of the Fourth Symphony begins in festive mood, using the Russian folk-tune, "In the Fields there stood a Birch-tree." The vivid theme of fate, recurring from the First Movement, and announced by the full brass choir, ultimately predominates.

THE HUNGARIAN DANCES OF BRAHMS

In the early spring of 1853, a youthful Hungarian exile and violinist extraordinary, Edward Remenyi, found himself the idol of Hamburg society. In response to his inquiry for an accompanist, a youth of twenty knocked at the door of his rooms, and introduced himself as Johannes Brahms. In the course of the evening, Brahms played one of his piano sonatas for his new friend. "My dear Brahms," exclaimed Remenyi, enraptured, "you are a genius!" "I wish the good people of Hamburg thought so," replied Brahms, with his melancholy smile. They did not leave the piano until four in the morning. Rehearsals and engagements were forgotten. When Remenyi presented his "discovery" to the Hamburgers, the Hamburgers, bored, dropped them both. Undaunted, Remenyi suggested a joint tour, which they immediately undertook. Writing their own announcements, they journeyed from town to town with varying success, sometimes reaping as little as five dollars at a concert. Thus they paid their way to Weimar and the shrine of Liszt. That master was struck by the lad's music. But while Liszt was playing, Brahms was caught dozing—an unpardonable offence. After this friction he felt constrained to leave, nor did his path ever cross Remenyi's again. This is hardly surprising, for the reticent, sensitive composer and the rather worldly violin virtuoso must have made an incongruous pair. Brahms carried with him to Hanover a letter of introduction to Joachim, the great violinist, and Joachim introduced him in turn to Robert Schumann. Both of these musicians became his lifelong friends. Schumann in the following October proclaimed to the world in print that he had found a veritable genius. Thus did the "gypsy" violinist help Brahms to fame while providing him with some valuable thematic material, for the themes of the Hungarian Dances were undoubtedly revealed to Brahms on that memorable tour, when Remenyi played several popular Hungarian Czardas at each concert. Of course, Brahms's treatment of the themes was an integral part of their success.

TSCHAIKOWSKY AND MME. VON MECK

Tschaikowsky's dedication of his Fourth Symphony "To my Best Friend" refers to Madame von Meck, a widow of large fortune with whom the composer had a remarkable relationship. As a patroness of music she corresponded with him, and, learning of his financial straits, arranged to send him a yearly sum of six thousand roubles, tactfully insisting that they should never meet. Through thirteen years of intimate friendship they never spoke. Once they encountered accidentally in a grove of her estate, whereupon Tschaikowsky lifted his hat and fled. By letter he became her intimate confidant. Earnestly he consecrated this symphony to her, informing her minutely of its progress as he composed it. "My dear Nadejda Filaretovna," he wrote, "it seems to me that this symphony is the best I have yet made. How glad I am that it is our work, and that you will know when you hear it how much I thought of you in every measure!" And after she had heard its first performance in Moscow, Tschaikowsky wrote from Florence: "I was in thought with you at the concert hall. I had calculated to the minute when the fate theme* would be sounded, and I then endeavored, following all the detail, to imagine what sort of impression the music would make." Mme. von Meck wrote in December, 1890, that she faced bankruptcy, and would have to discontinue the allowance. The letter caused a cruel misunderstanding. "Do you really think me incapable of remembering you, now that I no longer receive your money?" Tschaikowsky answered. For a while he was too wounded to make any further advance. When he did, there was no response. As fate had it, this long friendship was terminated only three years before the composer's death. And she learned the news on her own deathbed.

* The Finale of the Fourth Symphony begins in festive mood, using the Russian folk-tune, "In the Fields there stood a Birch-tree." The vivid theme of fate, recurring from the First Movement, and announced by the full brass choir, ultimately predominates.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

THE HUNGARIAN DANCES OF BRAHMS

In the early spring of 1853, a youthful Hungarian exile and violinist extraordinary, Edward Remenyi, found himself the idol of Hamburg society. In response to his inquiry for an accompanist, a youth of twenty knocked at the door of his rooms, and introduced himself as Johannes Brahms. In the course of the evening, Brahms played one of his piano sonatas for his new friend. "My dear Brahms," exclaimed Remenyi, enraptured, "you are a genius!" "I wish the good people of Hamburg thought so," replied Brahms, with his melancholy smile. They did not leave the piano until four in the morning. Rehearsals and engagements were forgotten. When Remenyi presented his "discovery" to the Hamburgers, the Hamburgers, bored, dropped them both. Undaunted, Remenyi suggested a joint tour, which they immediately undertook. Writing their own announcements, they journeyed from town to town with varying success, sometimes reaping as little as five dollars at a concert. Thus they paid their way to Weimar and the shrine of Liszt. That master was struck by the lad's music. But while Liszt was playing, Brahms was caught dozing—an unpardonable offence. After this friction he felt constrained to leave, nor did his path ever cross Remenyi's again. This is hardly surprising, for the reticent, sensitive composer and the rather worldly violin virtuoso must have made an incongruous pair. Brahms carried with him to Hanover a letter of introduction to Joachim, the great violinist, and Joachim introduced him in turn to Robert Schumann. Both of these musicians became his lifelong friends. Schumann in the following October proclaimed to the world in print that he had found a veritable genius. Thus did the "gypsy" violinist help Brahms to fame while providing him with some valuable thematic material, for the themes of the Hungarian Dances were undoubtedly revealed to Brahms on that memorable tour, when Remenyi played several popular Hungarian Czardas at each concert. Of course, Brahms's treatment of the themes was an integral part of their success.

TSCHAIKOWSKY AND MME. VON MECK

Tschaikowsky's dedication of his Fourth Symphony "To my Best Friend" refers to Madame von Meck, a widow of large fortune with whom the composer had a remarkable relationship. As a patroness of music she corresponded with him, and, learning of his financial straits, arranged to send him a yearly sum of six thousand roubles, tactfully insisting that they should never meet. Through thirteen years of intimate friendship they never spoke. Once they encountered accidentally in a grove of her estate, whereupon Tschaikowsky lifted his hat and fled. By letter he became her intimate confidant. Earnestly he consecrated this symphony to her, informing her minutely of its progress as he composed it. "My dear Nadejda Filaretovna," he wrote, "it seems to me that this symphony is the best I have yet made. How glad I am that it is our work, and that you will know when you hear it how much I thought of you in every measure!" And after she had heard its first performance in Moscow, Tschaikowsky wrote from Florence: "I was in thought with you at the concert hall. I had calculated to the minute when the fate theme* would be sounded, and I then endeavored, following all the detail, to imagine what sort of impression the music would make." Mme. von Meck wrote in December, 1890, that she faced bankruptcy, and would have to discontinue the allowance. The letter caused a cruel misunderstanding. "Do you really think me incapable of remembering you, now that I no longer receive your money?" Tschaikowsky answered. For a while he was too wounded to make any further advance. When he did, there was no response. As fate had it, this long friendship was terminated only three years before the composer's death. And she learned the news on her own deathbed.

* The Finale of the Fourth Symphony begins in festive mood, using the Russian folk-tune, "In the Fields there stood a Birch-tree." The vivid theme of fate, recurring from the First Movement, and announced by the full brass choir, ultimately predominates.

THE HUNGARIAN DANCES OF BRAHMS

In the early spring of 1853, a youthful Hungarian exile and violinist extraordinary, Edward Remenyi, found himself the idol of Hamburg society. In response to his inquiry for an accompanist, a youth of twenty knocked at the door of his rooms, and introduced himself as Johannes Brahms. In the course of the evening, Brahms played one of his piano sonatas for his new friend. "My dear Brahms," exclaimed Remenyi, enraptured, "you are a genius!" "I wish the good people of Hamburg thought so," replied Brahms, with his melancholy smile. They did not leave the piano until four in the morning. Rehearsals and engagements were forgotten. When Remenyi presented his "discovery" to the Hamburgers, the Hamburgers, bored, dropped them both. Undaunted, Remenyi suggested a joint tour, which they immediately undertook. Writing their own announcements, they journeyed from town to town with varying success, sometimes reaping as little as five dollars at a concert. Thus they paid their way to Weimar and the shrine of Liszt. That master was struck by the lad's music. But while Liszt was playing, Brahms was caught dozing—an unpardonable offence. After this friction he felt constrained to leave, nor did his path ever cross Remenyi's again. This is hardly surprising, for the reticent, sensitive composer and the rather worldly violin virtuoso must have made an incongruous pair. Brahms carried with him to Hanover a letter of introduction to Joachim, the great violinist, and Joachim introduced him in turn to Robert Schumann. Both of these musicians became his lifelong friends. Schumann in the following October proclaimed to the world in print that he had found a veritable genius. Thus did the "gypsy" violinist help Brahms to fame while providing him with some valuable thematic material, for the themes of the Hungarian Dances were undoubtedly revealed to Brahms on that memorable tour, when Remenyi played several popular Hungarian Czardas at each concert. Of course, Brahms's treatment of the themes was an integral part of their success.

TSCHAIKOWSKY AND MME. VON MECK

Tschaikowsky's dedication of his Fourth Symphony "To my Best Friend" refers to Madame von Meck, a widow of large fortune with whom the composer had a remarkable relationship. As a patroness of music she corresponded with him, and, learning of his financial straits, arranged to send him a yearly sum of six thousand roubles, tactfully insisting that they should never meet. Through thirteen years of intimate friendship they never spoke. Once they encountered accidentally in a grove of her estate, whereupon Tschaikowsky lifted his hat and fled. By letter he became her intimate confidant. Earnestly he consecrated this symphony to her, informing her minutely of its progress as he composed it. "My dear Nadejda Filaretovna," he wrote, "it seems to me that this symphony is the best I have yet made. How glad I am that it is our work, and that you will know when you hear it how much I thought of you in every measure!" And after she had heard its first performance in Moscow, Tschaikowsky wrote from Florence: "I was in thought with you at the concert hall. I had calculated to the minute when the fate theme* would be sounded, and I then endeavored, following all the detail, to imagine what sort of impression the music would make." Mme. von Meck wrote in December, 1890, that she faced bankruptcy, and would have to discontinue the allowance. The letter caused a cruel misunderstanding. "Do you really think me incapable of remembering you, now that I no longer receive your money?" Tschaikowsky answered. For a while he was too wounded to make any further advance. When he did, there was no response. As fate had it, this long friendship was terminated only three years before the composer's death. And she learned the news on her own deathbed.

* The Finale of the Fourth Symphony begins in festive mood, using the Russian folk-tune, "In the Fields there stood a Birch-tree." The vivid theme of fate, recurring from the First Movement, and announced by the full brass choir, ultimately predominates.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

CHABRIER'S ESPAÑA

Chabrier sketched his Rhapsody during a visit to Spain in 1882. Lamoureux persuaded Chabrier to orchestrate the earlier two-piano version, and when he rehearsed "España" for its first performance no one thought success possible. The score, with its wild originality, its novel effects, frightened the players. But the popularity of the piece was instantaneous. "España" is based on two Spanish dances, the Jota, vigorous and fiery, and the Malagueñ, languorous and sensual. It is said that only the rude theme of the trombones is Chabrier's own, the rest he gleaned from one or another part of Spain.

Visiting the dance halls of Seville at night, and making musical notes, he wrote home thus: "These eyes, these flowers in the admirable heads of hair, these shawls knotted about the body, these feet striking varied rhythms, these arms that run shivering the length of a body always in motion, these undulations of the hands, the brilliant smiles—and all this to the cry of Olle! Olle! Anda la Maria! The two guitarists, cigarette in mouth, keep gravely scratching something or other. The cries of the women excite the dancer, who becomes literally mad of her body.—Ah! It was a fine thing to see the Andalusians twisting their hips to the beat of Anda! Anda! and clapping their hands. There was a most curious blend of rhythms. I have noted it all—but what a trade, my children!"

JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

TANNHÄUSER IN PARIS

In 1861, when "Tannhäuser" was first produced at Paris, Wagner had not yet "arrived"—this in spite of the fact that he was forty-eight, and had composed all of his music dramas but three. A political exile from Germany for twelve years, he had never heard "Lohengrin," for performances had been given in German cities only. When the Princess Metternich prevailed upon the Emperor Napoleon to command "Tannhäuser" produced at the Grand Opera, sparing no expense, fortune seemed about to smile at last. But conductor, singers, and ballet director were obstinately uncomprehensive of Wagner's revolutionary methods. By refusing to introduce a ballet in the second act, and by exhausting the cast with 164 rehearsals, the determined but distraught composer made many enemies. He did concede a Bacchanale, to be danced in the Venusberg at the opening, but this was no sop to society, who seldom came into their boxes before the second act. Wagner thus incurred the wrath of the so-called "Jockey Club," which broke up three performances by organized demonstrations, and forced "Tannhäuser" from the stage. Catcalls, penny whistles, and brawls were their weapons. The indignant counter-applause of the audiences only increased the confusion of the singers and orchestra, none too at ease in their strange parts. At any rate, the music was lost in the din. Even the Emperor and the Empress in their box were powerless. It is related that the Princess Metternich, in mortification and grief, unwittingly tore her handsome fan into small bits. The press took sides with the foppish clique which had made the trouble. But France's foremost musicians and poets were Wagner's ardent champions.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

CHABRIER'S ESPAÑA

Chabrier sketched his Rhapsody during a visit to Spain in 1882. Lamoureux persuaded Chabrier to orchestrate the earlier two-piano version, and when he rehearsed "España" for its first performance no one thought success possible. The score, with its wild originality, its novel effects, frightened the players. But the popularity of the piece was instantaneous. "España" is based on two Spanish dances, the Jota, vigorous and fiery, and the Malagueñ, languorous and sensual. It is said that only the rude theme of the trombones is Chabrier's own, the rest he gleaned from one or another part of Spain.

Visiting the dance halls of Seville at night, and making musical notes, he wrote home thus: "These eyes, these flowers in the admirable heads of hair, these shawls knotted about the body, these feet striking varied rhythms, these arms that run shivering the length of a body always in motion, these undulations of the hands, the brilliant smiles—and all this to the cry of Olle! Olle! Anda la Maria! The two guitarists, cigarette in mouth, keep gravely scratching something or other. The cries of the women excite the dancer, who becomes literally mad of her body.—Ah! It was a fine thing to see the Andalusians twisting their hips to the beat of Anda! Anda! and clapping their hands. There was a most curious blend of rhythms. I have noted it all—but what a trade, my children!"

JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

CHABRIER'S ESPAÑA

Chabrier sketched his Rhapsody during a visit to Spain in 1882. Lamoureux persuaded Chabrier to orchestrate the earlier two-piano version, and when he rehearsed "España" for its first performance no one thought success possible. The score, with its wild originality, its novel effects, frightened the players. But the popularity of the piece was instantaneous. "España" is based on two Spanish dances, the Jota, vigorous and fiery, and the Malagueñ, languorous and sensual. It is said that only the rude theme of the trombones is Chabrier's own, the rest he gleaned from one or another part of Spain.

Visiting the dance halls of Seville at night, and making musical notes, he wrote home thus: "These eyes, these flowers in the admirable heads of hair, these shawls knotted about the body, these feet striking varied rhythms, these arms that run shivering the length of a body always in motion, these undulations of the hands, the brilliant smiles—and all this to the cry of Olle! Olle! Anda la Maria! The two guitarists, cigarette in mouth, keep gravely scratching something or other. The cries of the women excite the dancer, who becomes literally mad of her body.—Ah! It was a fine thing to see the Andalusians twisting their hips to the beat of Anda! Anda! and clapping their hands. There was a most curious blend of rhythms. I have noted it all—but what a trade, my children!"

AMHERST COLLEGE NIGHT

AT THE

POPS

CHEER FOR OLD AMHERST

Words and Music by J. N. Pierce, '02

Come and sing, all ye loyal Amherst men,
Come and give a rousing cheer,
Join our line as we march along so fine,
With hearts that know no fear.
Left and right 'neath the purple and the white
We will march in bold array.
So everybody shout and sing,
For this is Old Amherst's Day.

Chorus

Cheer for Old Amherst, Amherst must win;
Fight to the finish, never give in;
All play your best, boys,
We'll do the rest, boys,
Fight for the victory:—
All along the line. (Repeat.)

Soon our foe will our strength in conflict know,
Soon our power they will feel,
Vanquished then they'll give way to Amherst men,
Whose cords are strong as steel.
Then let's hear ringing out another cheer
Which will drive defeat away.
So everybody shout and sing,
For this is Old Amherst's Day.

LORD GEOFFREY AMHERST

Words and Music by J. S. Hamilton, '06

Oh, Lord Geoffrey Amherst was a soldier of the king,
 And he came from across the sea.
To the Frenchmen and the Indians he didn't do a thing
 In the wilds of this wild country,
 In the wilds of this wild country.
And for his Royal Majesty he fought with all his might,
 For he was a soldier loyal and true,
And he conquered all the enemies that came within his sight,
 And he looked around for more when he was through.

Chorus

Oh, Amherst! Brave Amherst! 'Twas a name known to fame in days of yore.
May it ever be glorious till the sun shall climb the heavens no more.

Oh, Lord Geoffrey Amherst was the man who gave his name
 To our college upon the hill,
And the story of his loyalty and bravery and fame
 Abides there among us still,
 Abides there among us still.
You may talk about your Johnnies and your Elis and the rest,
 For they are names that time can never dim,
But give us our only Geoffrey, he's the noblest and the best.
 To the end we will stand fast to him.

PAIGE'S HORSE

Words by Prof. F. J. E. Woodbridge, '89

Paige's horse is in the snowdrift,
 Paige's cutter upside down,
And my head goes reeling, reeling,
 As I stagger into town.

Refrain

Let the student lamp be burning,
 Send its gleam across the snow,
So that I, from Hamp returning,
 May find my way to go. (Repeat refrain.)

TO THE FAIREST COLLEGE OF THEM ALL

Words by D. C. Bartlett, '03

To the fairest college of them all
We will sing with hearty will,
Till the echoes from each classic hall
Fill our hearts with answering thrill.
We will sing of many a victory,
On diamond, field, and track,
'Mid the golden haze of college days,
Our hearts to thee turn back.

Chorus

Hail, Alma Mater,
Our well-loved mother!
Old Amherst, here's to thee.
We'll love thee ever,
All boys together,
And ever faithful be. (Repeat chorus.)

AMHERST ALMA MATER

Words and Music by J. S. Hamilton, '06

High upon her living throne
She stands in might serene,
Our fair old Alma Mater known
Afar thro' all the land, our noble queen.
In the way her light hath shown
We'll march our whole life through,
And we'll fight for her for ever,
And to her trust be true.

Chorus

Amherst, noble Alma Mater,
Mother of mighty men,
In thy glorious strength we'll win yet again.
Fairest college, ever bright we'll keep thy honored Fame,
And conquer in the purple and the white,
For the glory of thy name.

Scatter'd far beyond the hills
That circle round her throne,
Each heart with love still loyal thrills
That e'er her strong and tender power hath known.
Sons of Amherst are they still,
For all their whole life through,
And they'll fight for her for ever,
And to her trust be true.

STEIN SONG

Words of Chorus by BURGES JOHNSON, '99

Give a rouse, then, in the May-time
For a life that knows no fear,
Turn night-time into daytime
With the sunlight of good cheer.

Chorus

For it's always fair weather
When good fellows get together,
With a stein on the table
And a good song ringing clear;
May we never grow colder,
Stand shoulder to shoulder,
For it's Amherst forever,
And we'll give her cheer on cheer.

Oh, we're all frank-and-twenty
When the Spring is in the air,
And we've faith and hope a-plenty,
And we've life and love to spare.

Chorus

Then we'll swell aloud the chorus,
With our colors fair before us,
'Mid our hills of royal purple,
With the white clouds floating near.
For we'll never grow colder,
Stand shoulder to shoulder,
For it's Amherst forever,
So we'll give her cheer on cheer.

BERLIOZ'S RÁKÓCZY MARCH

When Berlioz, the romantic French composer, visited Budapest, he chose the popular Rákóczy theme with which to write a march for performance at his own concert there. His acquaintances feared that the Hungarians would consider their national theme desecrated, and make a scene. But Berlioz was confident. The beginning, unusually quiet for a march, caused a restless surprise, which might have been resentment. But as the music gradually worked up, with drum-beats like distant cannon, to a furious climax, patriotic fervor ran so high that Berlioz and the orchestra, confused by the clamor, had to go back to the beginning and start over again.

"Afterwards in the little room behind the stage," so writes Berlioz in his Memoirs, "a poorly dressed man with a strangely excited face dropped in upon me unawares, and embraced me, with his eyes full of tears. With difficulty he stammered out these words:—

"'Ah, sir! sir! I Hungarian—poor fellow—not speak French—un poco l'Italiano. Forgive my ecstasy. Ah, I understand your cannon. Yes, yes—the great battle—German dogs!' and striking himself a great blow on the chest with his fist—'In my heart here I shall bear you—ah, you Frenchman—you revolutionist—you do know how to make revolutionary music!'"

JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

TANNHÄUSER IN PARIS

In 1861, when "Tannhäuser" was first produced at Paris, Wagner had not yet "arrived"—this in spite of the fact that he was forty-eight, and had composed all of his music dramas but three. A political exile from Germany for twelve years, he had never heard "Lohengrin," for performances had been given in German cities only. When the Princess Metternich prevailed upon the Emperor Napoleon to command "Tannhäuser" produced at the Grand Opera, sparing no expense, fortune seemed about to smile at last. But conductor, singers, and ballet director were obstinately uncomprehensive of Wagner's revolutionary methods. By refusing to introduce a ballet in the second act, and by exhausting the cast with 164 rehearsals, the determined but distraught composer made many enemies. He did concede a Bacchanale, to be danced in the Venusberg at the opening, but this was no sop to society, who seldom came into their boxes before the second act. Wagner thus incurred the wrath of the so-called "Jockey Club," which broke up three performances by organized demonstrations, and forced "Tannhäuser" from the stage. Catcalls, penny whistles, and brawls were their weapons. The indignant counter-applause of the audiences only increased the confusion of the singers and orchestra, none too at ease in their strange parts. At any rate, the music was lost in the din. Even the Emperor and the Empress in their box were powerless. It is related that the Princess Metternich, in mortification and grief, unwittingly tore her handsome fan into small bits. The press took sides with the foppish clique which had made the trouble. But France's foremost musicians and poets were Wagner's ardent champions.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

TSCHAIKOWSKY AND THE "PATHETIC" SYMPHONY

The tragic depths of Tschaikowsky's last Symphony, and the fact that it was composed in the year of his death (1893), has led some to regard it as a premonition of his own fate. His brother Modeste disclaimed any such superstition, but told how, at the time of its composition, Peter seemed to be "the victim of some blind force which drove him hither and thither at will and cast him into restless despondency." Modeste considered this great Symphony as an "act of exorcism, whereby he freed himself of all the dark spirits which had possessed him in recent years." Certainly the progress of the work absorbed and diverted the composer. "I love it," he confided in a letter to his friend Davidoff, "as I have never loved any of my musical creations I consider it the best, especially the most open-hearted of all my works." Nor did its cold reception at the first performance alter his particular faith in it. He died a few days after this event, and then, with startling suddenness, the world acclaimed the Symphony. The Third Movement, a march-scherzo, is triumphant, festive, blatant. Coming before the Finale, which is a lamentation vividly emotional and drawn out, it must be intended as a mockery of ephemeral earthly splendor.

THE RUSSIAN "INVINCIBLE FIVE"

The meeting, in 1857, of Balakireff and Cui resulted in a devoted and life-long effort by five composers to establish a truly national school of music in Russia. These two, with Borodin, Moussorgsky, and Rimsky-Korsakoff, comprised the "Invincible Band." The national operas of Glinka and Dargomijsky were their traditional models. Musical fidelity to the text, artistic congruity, freedom from academism and foreign influences were their watchwords. The too easily assumed gloss of western musical culture with its artificialities, was their abomination. A true racial music must voice the Russian people in a vital way—therefore Russian folk-music must be its source, with no intrusion of western embellishments. Rubinstein, Glazounoff, Arensky, and their like, the "Five" considered "Russians who compose" rather than "Russian Composers." Tschaikowsky was sympathetic, but he could not have whole-heartedly joined them. Cui was the least important composer of the Band, but the most active fighter for the cause against a formidable array of enemies. Borodin, who was also a chemist, won them fame by his splendid compositions. Moussorgsky was the most unskilled and obscure, but his genius was perhaps the greatest, and his works the very embodiment of the ideals which the "Five" declared. He was certainly the most original. Rimsky-Korsakoff, the youngest, the depicter of fairy tales in music, was the most talented orchestrator and colorist. He was more docile by nature, and subject to influences and technical precept, but his invariable Russian subjects and Russian themes saved his loyalty to the cause. The Opera director Guedeonoff once assigned the magic legend "Mlada" to the four last named composers, each to write an act. The project fell through, but Rimsky-Korsakoff subsequently enlarged his portion to a whole opera of his own.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

AGIDE JACCHIA (born December 5, 1875) became a favorite pupil of Mascagni at an early age in the Pesaro Conservatory, and has been his lifelong friend and admirer, conducting all of the composer's operas in many parts of the world. Graduating at the age of twenty-three with a first prize for his cantata, "Inno a Rossini," Mr. Jacchia made an immediate mark as a conductor in Brescia, and subsequently in Milan and Rome. He first came to this country with Mascagni's Opera Company, which gave concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, and opera in the old Music Hall. In Italy again, Mr. Jacchia conducted many important operas in all the large cities, and returning to America, he toured the United States, Canada, and Central America with the Milan Opera Company. He aroused enormous patriotic fervor by composing the National Hymn of Central America, and dedicating it to the President of the Republic of Guatemala. He next had a successful season at the Academy of Music in New York, and during the following four years (1910–14) he was General Music Director of the Montreal Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada, successively. During the season of 1914–15 he was principal Italian conductor at the Century Theatre in New York. Thence he joined the Boston National Opera Company which toured the United States in the season of 1915–16. This is Mr. Jacchia's fourth season at the Pops.

JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

TANNHÄUSER IN PARIS

In 1861, when "Tannhäuser" was first produced at Paris, Wagner had not yet "arrived"—this in spite of the fact that he was forty-eight, and had composed all of his music dramas but three. A political exile from Germany for twelve years, he had never heard "Lohengrin," for performances had been given in German cities only. When the Princess Metternich prevailed upon the Emperor Napoleon to command "Tannhäuser" produced at the Grand Opera, sparing no expense, fortune seemed about to smile at last. But conductor, singers, and ballet director were obstinately uncomprehensive of Wagner's revolutionary methods. By refusing to introduce a ballet in the second act, and by exhausting the cast with 164 rehearsals, the determined but distraught composer made many enemies. He did concede a Bacchanale, to be danced in the Venusberg at the opening, but this was no sop to society, who seldom came into their boxes before the second act. Wagner thus incurred the wrath of the so-called "Jockey Club," which broke up three performances by organized demonstrations, and forced "Tannhäuser" from the stage. Catcalls, penny whistles, and brawls were their weapons. The indignant counter-applause of the audiences only increased the confusion of the singers and orchestra, none too at ease in their strange parts. At any rate, the music was lost in the din. Even the Emperor and the Empress in their box were powerless. It is related that the Princess Metternich, in mortification and grief, unwittingly tore her handsome fan into small bits. The press took sides with the foppish clique which had made the trouble. But France's foremost musicians and poets were Wagner's ardent champions.

THE VIOLA D' AMORE

The distinguishing characteristic of the viola d'amore, which was in general use in Europe during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, is a set of fine metal strings which are stretched beneath the seven played strings. These "sympathetic" strings are tuned to the key in which the instrument is to be played, but they are never touched by the bow. Their sole function is to vibrate sympathetically to the sound of the played strings, thus producing a wealth of overtones which give the instrument its peculiarly rich and mellow quality. The romantic name, "viola d' amore" must have come from this delicate response of string to string. The large number of played strings make the instrument especially fine for arpeggios, but they also make it extremely difficult. The musician must also look to his overtones.

The viola d' amore always had the "flaming sword" sound-holes. Good specimens are quite rare, because, not being adaptable to orchestral purposes, it fell into disuse during the last century. Nevertheless, Berlioz spoke highly of it, and Meyerbeer wrote a tenor aria with viola d' amore obbligato in his opera "Les Huguenots."

Dry Cold Storage

Furs and fur trimmed apparel, like fine jewelry, when not worn, should be protected from all damaging elements. But furs, unlike jewelry, are subjected to the ravages of the moth worm, fire and weather. Dry Cold Storage therefore, and a thorough cleansing are necessary for their preservation. With their high value and increasing cost, protection becomes doubly necessary.

TANNHÄUSER IN PARIS

In 1861, when "Tannhäuser" was first produced at Paris, Wagner had not yet "arrived"—this in spite of the fact that he was forty-eight, and had composed all of his music dramas but three. A political exile from Germany for twelve years, he had never heard "Lohengrin," for performances had been given in German cities only. When the Princess Metternich prevailed upon the Emperor Napoleon to command "Tannhäuser" produced at the Grand Opera, sparing no expense, fortune seemed about to smile at last. But conductor, singers, and ballet director were obstinately uncomprehensive of Wagner's revolutionary methods. By refusing to introduce a ballet in the second act, and by exhausting the cast with 164 rehearsals, the determined but distraught composer made many enemies. He did concede a Bacchanale, to be danced in the Venusberg at the opening, but this was no sop to society, who seldom came into their boxes before the second act. Wagner thus incurred the wrath of the so-called "Jockey Club," which broke up three performances by organized demonstrations, and forced "Tannhäuser" from the stage. Catcalls, penny whistles, and brawls were their weapons. The indignant counter-applause of the audiences only increased the confusion of the singers and orchestra, none too at ease in their strange parts. At any rate, the music was lost in the din. Even the Emperor and the Empress in their box were powerless. It is related that the Princess Metternich, in mortification and grief, unwittingly tore her handsome fan into small bits. The press took sides with the foppish clique which had made the trouble. But France's foremost musicians and poets were Wagner's ardent champions.

"RIENZI," WAGNER'S FIRST SUCCESSFUL OPERA

In Dresden in 1842 Richard Wagner, then twenty-nine years old, witnessed the first performance of his opera "Rienzi." It was conventional enough to have considerable success despite the fact that it lasted from six o'clock until midnight. Nevertheless it brought scant funds to its composer, as was the case with all but his latest music dramas. A good critic of his own works, Wagner immediately realized that, aside from its length, "Rienzi" was overloaded with brass passages and with undramatic conventions. But the public liked it, and turning only half an ear to "The Flying Dutchman" and "Tannhaüser" (which followed), they demanded that Wagner go back to the style of "Rienzi!"

The Overture is built entirely on themes from the opera itself. The repeated A of the trumpet, swelling and diminishing, was the call for the people to rise in arms and cast off the tyrannical ruler of the nobility. The fine cantilena which follows in the strings, and permeates the overture, is the theme of Rienzi's prayer in the last act.

THE RUSSIAN "INVINCIBLE FIVE"

The meeting, in 1857, of Balakireff and Cui resulted in a devoted and life-long effort by five composers to establish a truly national school of music in Russia. These two, with Borodin, Moussorgsky, and Rimsky-Korsakoff, comprised the "Invincible Band." The national operas of Glinka and Dargomijsky were their traditional models. Musical fidelity to the text, artistic congruity, freedom from academism and foreign influences were their watchwords. The too easily assumed gloss of western musical culture with its artificialities, was their abomination. A true racial music must voice the Russian people in a vital way—therefore Russian folk-music must be its source, with no intrusion of western embellishments. Rubinstein, Glazounoff, Arensky, and their like, the "Five" considered "Russians who compose" rather than "Russian Composers." Tschaikowsky was sympathetic, but he could not have whole-heartedly joined them. Cui was the least important composer of the Band, but the most active fighter for the cause against a formidable array of enemies. Borodin, who was also a chemist, won them fame by his splendid compositions. Moussorgsky was the most unskilled and obscure, but his genius was perhaps the greatest, and his works the very embodiment of the ideals which the "Five" declared. He was certainly the most original. Rimsky-Korsakoff, the youngest, the depicter of fairy tales in music, was the most talented orchestrator and colorist. He was more docile by nature, and subject to influences and technical precept, but his invariable Russian subjects and Russian themes saved his loyalty to the cause. The Opera director Guedeonoff once assigned the magic legend "Mlada" to the four last named composers, each to write an act. The project fell through, but Rimsky-Korsakoff subsequently enlarged his portion to a whole opera of his own.

AGIDE JACCHIA (born December 5, 1875) became a favorite pupil of Mascagni at an early age in the Pesaro Conservatory, and has been his lifelong friend and admirer, conducting all of the composer's operas in many parts of the world. Graduating at the age of twenty-three with a first prize for his cantata, "Inno a Rossini," Mr. Jacchia made an immediate mark as a conductor in Brescia, and subsequently in Milan and Rome. He first came to this country with Mascagni's Opera Company, which gave concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, and opera in the old Music Hall. In Italy again, Mr. Jacchia conducted many important operas in all the large cities, and returning to America, he toured the United States, Canada, and Central America with the Milan Opera Company. He aroused enormous patriotic fervor by composing the National Hymn of Central America, and dedicating it to the President of the Republic of Guatemala. He next had a successful season at the Academy of Music in New York, and during the following four years (1910–14) he was General Music Director of the Montreal Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada, successively. During the season of 1914–15 he was principal Italian conductor at the Century Theatre in New York. Thence he joined the Boston National Opera Company which toured the United States in the season of 1915–16. This is Mr. Jacchia's fourth season at the Pops.

Dry Cold Storage

Furs and fur trimmed apparel, like fine jewelry, when not worn, should be protected from all damaging elements. But furs, unlike jewelry, are subjected to the ravages of the moth worm, fire and weather. Dry Cold Storage therefore, and a thorough cleansing are necessary for their preservation. With their high value and increasing cost, protection becomes doubly necessary.

Hovey's Storage Service includes:

OUR ALMA MATER

CHRISTINE BROWN — MARION FITCH

Our Alma Mater, to us you give
Ideals which teach us how to live:
Courage to help us to see things through,
Power our life-work to do.
Life will be richer for knowing you,
Brighter our land will be.
Service we've learned of you,—
Service strong, fine, and true,
Service which brings liberty.

We may be needed to serve our land.
You have made ready brain and hand,
Taught us to labor and never rest
Till we have done our best.
Life will be richer for knowing you,
Brighter our land will be.
Service we've learned of you,—
Service strong, fine, and true,
Service which brings liberty.

SIMMONS MARCHING SONG

EMMA BURCHENAL — EMMA BURCHENAL

See them; here come the Simmons girls a-marching
Down the Fenway in rain or shine.
See them; you will always find them ready
For the good time or the grind.
So come and learn the lesson
Simmons College has set for you to do.
So come be on your mettle,
And cheer for the Gold and Blue. Ra! Ra!
To Household Ec we'll introduce you,
And to Science we'll let you bow:
Come and be a Secretary,
Come and manage our Library,—
Simmons College will teach you how.

(OVER)

See them, here come the girls from other colleges
To register in the Fall.
See them, oh! they have found the seat of knowledge,
It is Simmons after all!
So come and learn the lesson
Simmons College has set for you to do.
So come be on your mettle,
And cheer for the Gold and Blue. Ra! Ra!
To Household Ec we'll introduce you,
And to Science we'll let you bow;
Come and be a Secretary,
Come and manage our Library,—
Simmons College will teach you how.

COLLEGE HYMN

SARAH LOUISE ARNOLD — KELLER'S HYMN

Hail, Alma Mater! we pledge our love to thee,
Bring thee our hearts and hands in full loyalty,
Praising thy counsel and trusting thy truth.
Lift we our song to thee: oh, guide thou our youth.
Lift we our song to thee: oh, bless now our youth.
Make us, thy children, generous and just.
Send us to labor, when leave thee we must.
Ready for service and worthy of trust.

Hail, Alma Mater! thy praises we sing.
One in allegiance, our tributes we bring.
Fair shall thy name be, trusted to our care.
For thy dear sake our lives shall be more fair.
For thy dear sake our lives shall be more fair.
Make us, thy children, strong and pure and just.
Send us to labor, when leave thee we must.
Ready for service and worthy of trust.

BIZET, DAUDET, AND "L'ARLÉSIENNE"

The two "L'Arlésienne" suites are selected from the incidental music which Bizet wrote for Alphonse Daudet's play of the same name. The first performance, in Paris in 1872, was coolly received, and Bizet was accused of imitating the then unpopular Wagner. Nor did its revival in 1885 meet with any success. "Public cold, icy cold," wrote Edmond de Goncourt, describing the occasion. "Mme. Daudet beats her fan about her with the angry rustling of the wings of fighting birds. Audience still cold, ready to titter and sneer at the piece. It applauds the music enthusiastically. Suddenly Mme. Daudet, who is leaning in a state of pitiful depression against the side of her box, exclaims: 'I'm going home to bed. It makes me sick to stay here.' Thank God, with the third act the piece goes, and finally brings loud applause." But the zealous Zola wrote of it: "The clever dramatists had better not smile when they speak of Alphonse Daudet as a dramatic author. For he will bury them all a hundred years hence with 'L'Arlésienne.' Such is the consolation of true writers. They have the centuries to come to prove them right. One may despise them as he pleases. They remain erect, and impose themselves at last. They live." The tale is of Frederi, a young farmer, who becomes violently infatuated with a beauty of Arles when she dances the farandole. Told that she is entirely without morals and unworthy to be his wife, he tries to forget her. He makes love to the virtuous maiden Vivetto, but cannot subdue his passion for the other, whose haunting spectre makes jealousy and dissention between them. Frenzied one night by the sounds of the farandole, the lover hurls himself from his garret window.

ENESCO'S ROUMANIAN RHAPSODY

Roumania's sole composer of note, Georges Enesco, has also won much fame as a violin virtuoso. At the age of three he asked his father, who was a farmer, to bring him a fiddle from the town where he bartered his grain. When the father brought him a toy instrument with three strings, small Georges said, "I wanted a fiddle, not a plaything." Obtaining a real violin, Georges learned the notes from a strolling musician, and picked up tunes at village fairs and weddings. When he also showed a talent for composition his father took him to Helmesberger at the Vienna Conservatory, who said, "This is a conservatory, not a cradle." He was admitted, nevertheless, and in four years carried away many honors. Thence he studied in Paris with Massenet, Fauré, and Gedalge. As composer and as violinist, Paris received him with open arms. His music has been called more Parisian than Roumanian, with some justice, but never has he forfeited his Roumanian affiliations. He was made Court Violinist to the Queen of Roumania—whatever that position of honor may signify at this moment in European history. The First Roumanian Rhapsody is national enough, being constructed of Roumanian themes, which are repeated in varied orchestral combinations, rather than developed.

Dry Cold Storage

Furs and fur trimmed apparel, like fine jewelry, when not worn, should be protected from all damaging elements. But furs, unlike jewelry, are subjected to the ravages of the moth worm, fire and weather. Dry Cold Storage therefore, and a thorough cleansing are necessary for their preservation. With their high value and increasing cost, protection becomes doubly necessary.

Hovey's Storage Service includes:

SPECIAL SERVICE AT BOTH INTERMISSIONS

FROM NIETZSCHE'S ESSAY "THE CASE OF WAGNER"

"I heard yesterday—will you believe it?—the masterpiece of Bizet for the twentieth time. How such a work completes one! Through it, one almost becomes a 'masterpiece' oneself.—And, as a matter of fact, each time I heard Carmen it seemed to me that I was more of a philosopher, a better philosopher than at other times: I became so forbearing, so happy, so Indian, so settled. . . . Whereas that other orchestration which is all the rage at present—the Wagnerian—affects me terribly. I call it Sirocco. A disagreeable sweat breaks out all over me. My fine weather vanishes. But Bizet's music seems to me perfect. It approaches nimbly, amiably, and does not produce sweat. What is good is easy—everything divine runs on light feet: this is the first principle of my aesthetics. This music is wicked, refined, fatalistic. . . . With Carmen one takes leave of the humid north, and all the steam of the Wagnerian ideal. It possesses first of all the dryness of air in a warm climate—it limpidezza. Il faut méditeraniser la musique. Its love is not the love of Wagner's 'cultured maidens'! But love as fate, as fatality, cynical, innocent, cruel—and thus true to nature. Love whose very essence is mortal hatred and the war of the sexes. Nowhere is the tragic irony, which is the kernel of love, expressed in so severe and terrible a formula as in the last cry of Don José at the close of the opera—'Yes! It is I who have killed her! O my Carmen—my Carmen adored!'

. . . "And yet I was one of the most corrupted Wagnerites—I was able to take Wagner seriously. Oh, this old magician! what tricks has he not played upon us! The first thing his art places in our hands is a magnifying glass: we look through it, and we no longer trust our own eyes. Everything grows bigger, even Wagner grows bigger. What a clever rattlesnake. Throughout his life he rattled 'redemption' in our ears (he is always saving some one in his operas)—also 'loyalty' and 'purity,' and he retired from the corrupt world with a song of praise to chastity. And we believed it all!"

TSCHAIKOWSKY'S "1812" OVERTURE

The dedication of the Church of the Redeemer at Moscow, in 1881, was the occasion for this Overture. It celebrates the famous year when the invading army of Napoleon was repulsed at Borodino, and the fortunes of war at last turned in favor of the Russians. It was to be performed in the public square before the church by a colossal orchestra; church bells were to be used, and the bass drum part was to be replaced by cannon. The score indicates the following instruments of percussion: three kettledrums, bass drum, snare drum, cymbals, triangle, tambourine, two large bells, and cannon shots with a full brass band ad libitum for the coda.

The music begins largo with the Russian Hymn "God, Preserve Thy People." The pace quickens with the intrusion of a stormy development. Then comes the tempestuous principal theme. Fragments of the "Marsellaise" alternate with a quieter Cossack theme, characterizing the Russian hosts. The French hymn is worked up to the verge of a triumphant climax, when it is submerged in a mighty orchestral storm. The original theme of the largo recurs in majestic fashion, and simultaneously the Russian Hymn of Lvoff is thundered forth. Tschaikowsky has been accused of anachronism, since the "Marsellaise" was not in favor during the first Empire, nor was Lvoff's Hymn composed until twenty-seven years later. Yet the associations of the two airs probably aroused the intended emotions in the listeners of 1881.

Dry Cold Storage

Furs and fur trimmed apparel, like fine jewelry, when not worn, should be protected from all damaging elements. But furs, unlike jewelry, are subjected to the ravages of the moth worm, fire and weather. Dry Cold Storage therefore, and a thorough cleansing are necessary for their preservation. With their high value and increasing cost, protection becomes doubly necessary.

Hovey's Storage Service includes:

"I heard yesterday—will you believe it?—the masterpiece of Bizet for the twentieth time. How such a work completes one! Through it, one almost becomes a 'masterpiece' oneself.—And, as a matter of fact, each time I heard Carmen it seemed to me that I was more of a philosopher, a better philosopher than at other times: I became so forbearing, so happy, so Indian, so settled. . . . Whereas that other orchestration which is all the rage at present—the Wagnerian—affects me terribly. I call it Sirocco. A disagreeable sweat breaks out all over me. My fine weather vanishes. But Bizet's music seems to me perfect. It approaches nimbly, amiably, and does not produce sweat. What is good is easy—everything divine runs on light feet: this is the first principle of my æsthetics. This music is wicked, refined, fatalistic. . . . With Carmen one takes leave of the humid north, and all the steam of the Wagnerian ideal. It possesses first of all the dryness of air in a warm climate—it limpidezza. Il faut méditéraniser la musique. Its love is not the love of Wagner's 'cultured maidens'! But love as fate, as fatality, cynical, innocent, cruel—and thus true to nature. Love whose very essence is mortal hatred and the war of the sexes. Nowhere is the tragic irony, which is the kernel of love, expressed in so severe and terrible a formula as in the last cry of Don José at the close of the opera—'Yes! It is I who have killed her! O my Carmen—my Carmen adored!'

. . . "And yet I was one of the most corrupted Wagnerites—I was able to take Wagner seriously. Oh, this old magician! what tricks has he not played upon us! The first thing his art places in our hands is a magnifying glass: we look through it, and we no longer trust our own eyes. Everything grows bigger, even Wagner grows bigger. What a clever rattlesnake. Throughout his life he rattled 'redemption' in our ears (he is always saving some one in his operas)—also 'loyalty' and 'purity,' and he retired from the corrupt world with a song of praise to chastity. And we believed it all!"

"RIENZI," WAGNER'S FIRST SUCCESSFUL OPERA

In Dresden in 1842 Richard Wagner, then twenty-nine years old, witnessed the first performance of his opera "Rienzi." It was conventional enough to have considerable success despite the fact that it lasted from six o'clock until midnight. Nevertheless it brought scant funds to its composer, as was the case with all but his latest music dramas. A good critic of his own works, Wagner immediately realized that, aside from its length, "Rienzi" was overloaded with brass passages and with undramatic conventions. But the public liked it, and turning only half an ear to "The Flying Dutchman" and "Tannhaüser" (which followed), they demanded that Wagner go back to the style of "Rienzi!"

The Overture is built entirely on themes from the opera itself. The repeated A of the trumpet, swelling and diminishing, was the call for the people to rise in arms and cast off the tyrannical ruler of the nobility. The fine cantilena which follows in the strings, and permeates the overture, is the theme of Rienzi's prayer in the last act.

TANNHÄUSER IN PARIS

In 1861, when "Tannhäuser" was first produced at Paris, Wagner had not yet "arrived"—this in spite of the fact that he was forty-eight, and had composed all of his music dramas but three. A political exile from Germany for twelve years, he had never heard "Lohengrin," for performances had been given in German cities only. When the Princess Metternich prevailed upon the Emperor Napoleon to command "Tannhäuser" produced at the Grand Opera, sparing no expense, fortune seemed about to smile at last. But conductor, singers, and ballet director were obstinately uncomprehensive of Wagner's revolutionary methods. By refusing to introduce a ballet in the second act, and by exhausting the cast with 164 rehearsals, the determined but distraught composer made many enemies. He did concede a Bacchanale, to be danced in the Venusberg at the opening, but this was no sop to society, who seldom came into their boxes before the second act. Wagner thus incurred the wrath of the so-called "Jockey Club," which broke up three performances by organized demonstrations, and forced "Tannhäuser" from the stage. Catcalls, penny whistles, and brawls were their weapons. The indignant counter-applause of the audiences only increased the confusion of the singers and orchestra, none too at ease in their strange parts. At any rate, the music was lost in the din. Even the Emperor and the Empress in their box were powerless. It is related that the Princess Metternich, in mortification and grief, unwittingly tore her handsome fan into small bits. The press took sides with the foppish clique which had made the trouble. But France's foremost musicians and poets were Wagner's ardent champions.

AGIDE JACCHIA (born December 5, 1875) became a favorite pupil of Mascagni at an early age in the Pesaro Conservatory, and has been his lifelong friend and admirer, conducting all of the composer's operas in many parts of the world. Graduating at the age of twenty-three with a first prize for his cantata, "Inno a Rossini," Mr. Jacchia made an immediate mark as a conductor in Brescia, and subsequently in Milan and Rome. He first came to this country with Mascagni's Opera Company, which gave concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, and opera in the old Music Hall. In Italy again, Mr. Jacchia conducted many important operas in all the large cities, and returning to America, he toured the United States, Canada, and Central America with the Milan Opera Company. He aroused enormous patriotic fervor by composing the National Hymn of Central America, and dedicating it to the President of the Republic of Guatemala. He next had a successful season at the Academy of Music in New York, and during the following four years (1910–14) he was General Music Director of the Montreal Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada, successively. During the season of 1914–15 he was principal Italian conductor at the Century Theatre in New York. Thence he joined the Boston National Opera Company which toured the United States in the season of 1915–16. This is Mr. Jacchia's fourth season at the Pops.

OUR ALMA MATER

CHRISTINE BROWN — MARION FITCH

Our Alma Mater, to us you give
Ideals which teach us how to live:
Courage to help us to see things through,
Power our life-work to do.
Life will be richer for knowing you,
Brighter our land will be.
Service we've learned of you,—
Service strong, fine, and true,
Service which brings liberty.

We may be needed to serve our land.
You have made ready brain and hand,
Taught us to labor and never rest
Till we have done our best.
Life will be richer for knowing you,
Brighter our land will be.
Service we've learned of you,—
Service strong, fine, and true,
Service which brings liberty.

SIMMONS MARCHING SONG

EMMA BURCHENAL — EMMA BURCHENAL

See them; here come the Simmons girls a-marching
Down the Fenway in rain or shine.
See them; you will always find them ready
For the good time or the grind.
So come and learn the lesson
Simmons College has set for you to do.
So come be on your mettle,
And cheer for the Gold and Blue. Ra! Ra!
To Household Ec we'll introduce you,
And to Science we'll let you bow:
Come and be a Secretary,
Come and manage our Library,—
Simmons College will teach you how.

(OVER)

See them, here come the girls from other colleges
To register in the Fall.
See them, oh! they have found the seat of knowledge,
It is Simmons after all!
So come and learn the lesson
Simmons College has set for you to do.
So come be on your mettle,
And cheer for the Gold and Blue. Ra! Ra!
To Household Ec we'll introduce you,
And to Science we'll let you bow;
Come and be a Secretary,
Come and manage our Library,—
Simmons College will teach you how.

COLLEGE HYMN

SARAH LOUISE ARNOLD — KELLER'S HYMN

Hail, Alma Mater! we pledge our love to thee,
Bring thee our hearts and hands in full loyalty,
Praising thy counsel and trusting thy truth.
Lift we our song to thee: oh, guide thou our youth.
Lift we our song to thee: oh, bless now our youth.
Make us, thy children, generous and just.
Send us to labor, when leave thee we must.
Ready for service and worthy of trust.

Hail, Alma Mater! thy praises we sing.
One in allegiance, our tributes we bring.
Fair shall thy name be, trusted to our care.
For thy dear sake our lives shall be more fair.
For thy dear sake our lives shall be more fair.

TANNHÄUSER IN PARIS

In 1861, when "Tannhäuser" was first produced at Paris, Wagner had not yet "arrived"—this in spite of the fact that he was forty-eight, and had composed all of his music dramas but three. A political exile from Germany for twelve years, he had never heard "Lohengrin," for performances had been given in German cities only. When the Princess Metternich prevailed upon the Emperor Napoleon to command "Tannhäuser" produced at the Grand Opera, sparing no expense, fortune seemed about to smile at last. But conductor, singers, and ballet director were obstinately uncomprehensive of Wagner's revolutionary methods. By refusing to introduce a ballet in the second act, and by exhausting the cast with 164 rehearsals, the determined but distraught composer made many enemies. He did concede a Bacchanale, to be danced in the Venusberg at the opening, but this was no sop to society, who seldom came into their boxes before the second act. Wagner thus incurred the wrath of the so-called "Jockey Club," which broke up three performances by organized demonstrations, and forced "Tannhäuser" from the stage. Catcalls, penny whistles, and brawls were their weapons. The indignant counter-applause of the audiences only increased the confusion of the singers and orchestra, none too at ease in their strange parts. At any rate, the music was lost in the din. Even the Emperor and the Empress in their box were powerless. It is related that the Princess Metternich, in mortification and grief, unwittingly tore her handsome fan into small bits. The press took sides with the foppish clique which had made the trouble. But France's foremost musicians and poets were Wagner's ardent champions.

AGIDE JACCHIA (born December 5, 1875) became a favorite pupil of Mascagni at an early age in the Pesaro Conservatory, and has been his lifelong friend and admirer, conducting all of the composer's operas in many parts of the world. Graduating at the age of twenty-three with a first prize for his cantata, "Inno a Rossini," Mr. Jacchia made an immediate mark as a conductor in Brescia, and subsequently in Milan and Rome. He first came to this country with Mascagni's Opera Company, which gave concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, and opera in the old Music Hall. In Italy again, Mr. Jacchia conducted many important operas in all the large cities, and returning to America, he toured the United States, Canada, and Central America with the Milan Opera Company. He aroused enormous patriotic fervor by composing the National Hymn of Central America, and dedicating it to the President of the Republic of Guatemala. He next had a successful season at the Academy of Music in New York, and during the following four years (1910–14) he was General Music Director of the Montreal Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada, successively. During the season of 1914–15 he was principal Italian conductor at the Century Theatre in New York. Thence he joined the Boston National Opera Company which toured the United States in the season of 1915–16. This is Mr. Jacchia's fourth season at the Pops.

Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

CHABRIER'S ESPAÑA

Chabrier sketched his Rhapsody during a visit to Spain in 1882. Lamoureux persuaded Chabrier to orchestrate the earlier two-piano version, and when he rehearsed "España" for its first performance no one thought success possible. The score, with its wild originality, its novel effects, frightened the players. But the popularity of the piece was instantaneous. "España" is based on two Spanish dances, the Jota, vigorous and fiery, and the Malagueñ, languorous and sensual. It is said that only the rude theme of the trombones is Chabrier's own, the rest he gleaned from one or another part of Spain.

Visiting the dance halls of Seville at night, and making musical notes, he wrote home thus: "These eyes, these flowers in the admirable heads of hair, these shawls knotted about the body, these feet striking varied rhythms, these arms that run shivering the length of a body always in motion, these undulations of the hands, the brilliant smiles—and all this to the cry of Olle! Olle! Anda la Maria! The two guitarists, cigarette in mouth, keep gravely scratching something or other. The cries of the women excite the dancer, who becomes literally mad of her body.—Ah! It was a fine thing to see the Andalusians twisting their hips to the beat of Anda! Anda! and clapping their hands. There was a most curious blend of rhythms. I have noted it all—but what a trade, my children!"

AGIDE JACCHIA (born December 5, 1875) became a favorite pupil of Mascagni at an early age in the Pesaro Conservatory, and has been his lifelong friend and admirer, conducting all of the composer's operas in many parts of the world. Graduating at the age of twenty-three with a first prize for his cantata, "Inno a Rossini," Mr. Jacchia made an immediate mark as a conductor in Brescia, and subsequently in Milan and Rome. He first came to this country with Mascagni's Opera Company, which gave concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, and opera in the old Music Hall. In Italy again, Mr. Jacchia conducted many important operas in all the large cities, and returning to America, he toured the United States, Canada, and Central America with the Milan Opera Company. He aroused enormous patriotic fervor by composing the National Hymn of Central America, and dedicating it to the President of the Republic of Guatemala. He next had a successful season at the Academy of Music in New York, and during the following four years (1910–14) he was General Music Director of the Montreal Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada, successively. During the season of 1914–15 he was principal Italian conductor at the Century Theatre in New York. Thence he joined the Boston National Opera Company which toured the United States in the season of 1915–16. This is Mr. Jacchia's fourth season at the Pops.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

MENDELSSOHN'S FAIRY OVERTURE

Felix Mendelssohn and his sister Fanny "discovered" Shakespeare together in 1826, when they read his plays aloud. The young composer of seventeen was particularly enchanted with "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and wrote an overture suitable for it in the summer of that year. He worked on his score in the large garden of the Mendelssohns' house in a suburb of Berlin. Felix had also furnished a summer house with writing materials and edited a little newspaper which in summer went by the name of The Garden Times, and in the winter, The Snow and Tea Times. The overture was in its original form a piano duet, which the brother and sister played together, to the delight of their friends. While the composer was at work over the orchestration, a great fly buzzed over his head, and Mendelssohn wrote its drone into his score (descending scales for the violoncellos). After an early performance of the overture, the conductor left the score in a hackney coach. It was never found, and Mendelssohn had to rewrite the whole piece from memory.

The music begins (and likewise ends) with four prolonged chords for the wood-wind, which introduces the lovely fairy music, played softly by the strings. A rustic "Bergamesque" dance characterizes the "play within a play." The imitation of the bray of an ass is of course an allusion to Bottom.

THE HARVARD GLEE CLUB

Which will sing at the Pops on Harvard Night (June 1)

There is as much difference between the Harvard Glee Club and the general run of glee clubs as between a fine violinist and a mandolin picker. The idea of real musical accomplishment has simply never occurred to other college singing societies. Dr. (and also Assistant Professor) Archibald T. Davison may be thanked for the idea and for its realization. Having taken the Harvard College course in the years 1902–06, Dr. Davison studied music also as a graduate, and the organ in particular under Widor in Paris. He began to teach at Harvard in 1908, and since 1910 has been organist and choirmaster of the college chapel. His "Tragic Overture" was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in April, 1918.

Dr. Davison has developed the Glee Club, despite its yearly changes of personnel, into as illustrious and finely perfected a male chorus as you could find anywhere. He has genuinely interested them in the best music as well as the lighter sort, and taught them to bring out all its beauties. Thus equipped, they have sung publicly in Cambridge and in Boston on different occasions, appearing jointly with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Muck and under Mr. Monteux. Last winter they made a successful tour of Philadelphia, Washington, Cincinnati, Detroit, Cleveland, and Vassar. Wherever they have sung this amateur choir has moved the "connoiseurs" to enthusiastic praise of their eloquence and sensitive response to the sublest balance and shading. Next winter during the Christmas recess they plan to journey to California and sing in the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

Dry Cold Storage

Furs and fur trimmed apparel, like fine jewelry, when not worn, should be protected from all damaging elements. But furs, unlike jewelry, are subjected to the ravages of the moth worm, fire and weather. Dry Cold Storage therefore, and a thorough cleansing are necessary for their preservation. With their high value and increasing cost, protection becomes doubly necessary.

Hovey's Storage Service includes:

RIMSKY-KORSAKOFF

Nicolai Andreyevich Rimsky-Korsakoff, the Russian composer and professor of music who is always pictured with iron spectacles and a long beard, was born in 1844. His parents, country gentry of moderate means, discovered that their small son showed a remarkable sense of rhythm, performing on his drum, and that with no training whatsoever he possessed "absolute pitch." His early piano teachers, none too competent, did not awaken his stronger musical instincts.. Studying in the Petrograd Naval College, he also kept up his music, although his elder brother tried to discourage him. At length his meeting with Balakireff opened up to him an entire new world. The ardent circle of musical nationalists received this promising young disciple with open arms. A three years' cruise, requisite for every budding naval officer, tore him away from his new friends, but he returned to them the more eagerly with an enlarged experience and an acquaintance with the sea which may have inspired the fine sea music in "Sadko" and "Scheherazade." Appointed Director of the Petrograd Conservatory, he was assailed by doubts as to his technical proficiency, and zealously studied counterpoint and instrumentation. This caused his colleagues of the "Invincible Band" to look upon his subsequent compositions, which were of course affected, somewhat askance. But he remained stanchly national and iconoclastic. His best-known works were composed in this period. He died in April, 1908. Rash allusions caused more than one of his operas to be banned by the censor, until his "influence" prevailed. His last opera, "The Golden Cock," caused offence in high quarters on account of the satirization of a weak and fatuous monarch. Its performance was not allowed until after his death.

THE HARVARD GLEE CLUB

Which will sing at the Pops on Harvard Night (June 1)

There is as much difference between the Harvard Glee Club and the general run of glee clubs as between a fine violinist and a mandolin picker. The idea of real musical accomplishment has simply never occurred to other college singing societies. Dr. (and also Assistant Professor) Archibald T. Davison may be thanked for the idea and for its realization. Having taken the Harvard College course in the years 1902–06, Dr. Davison studied music also as a graduate, and the organ in particular under Widor in Paris. He began to teach at Harvard in 1908, and since 1910 has been organist and choirmaster of the college chapel. His "Tragic Overture" was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in April, 1918.

Dr. Davison has developed the Glee Club, despite its yearly changes of personnel, into as illustrious and finely perfected a male chorus as you could find anywhere. He has genuinely interested them in the best music as well as the lighter sort, and taught them to bring out all its beauties. Thus equipped, they have sung publicly in Cambridge and in Boston on different occasions, appearing jointly with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Muck and under Mr. Monteux. Last winter they made a successful tour of Philadelphia, Washington, Cincinnati, Detroit, Cleveland, and Vassar. Wherever they have sung this amateur choir has moved the "connoiseurs" to enthusiastic praise of their eloquence and sensitive response to the sublest balance and shading. Next winter during the Christmas recess they plan to journey to California and sing in the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena.

THE THIRTY-FIFTH SEASON
NINETEEN HUNDRED TWENTY

You can have a Pop Concert at Home
any Evening with

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

Dry Cold Storage

Furs and fur trimmed apparel, like fine jewelry, when not worn, should be protected from all damaging elements. But furs, unlike jewelry, are subjected to the ravages of the moth worm, fire and weather. Dry Cold Storage therefore, and a thorough cleansing are necessary for their preservation. With their high value and increasing cost, protection becomes doubly necessary.

TSCHAIKOWSKY'S BALLET, "NUTCRACKER"

"A Christmas tree in the house of President Silberhaus. The guests assemble, and the candles are lighted. Entrance of the children. After they have all received their presents, Councillor Drosselmeyer arrives, bringing dolls which can move about as though they were alive. He gives also to his favorite, Marie, the daughter of the President, an ordinary nutcracker, and this nutcracker pleases her better than all the other presents. Her brother Fritz and the other boys snatch it away from her and break it. Marie bursts into tears, caresses the poor nutcracker, busies herself over it as though it were sick, puts it to bed and rocks it to sleep. The party is at an end, and the guests go home. The candles on the tree are put out. Marie cannot sleep, and she thinks constantly about the nutcracker. At last she leaves her little bed and steals downstairs, only to have a look at him. It is midnight. She suddenly hears a noise as though mice were clattering out from all sides. Then a wonderful thing happens. The fir-tree grows and grows; all the playthings and the honey-cakes come to life. Even the spoiled nutcracker wakes up and moves about. A fight begins between the playthings and the mice. The latter, led by their king, easily defeat the honey-cake soldiers; but the tin soldiers, under the command of the nutcracker, rush to help their comrades. A fierce battle ensues. The nutcracker fights with the king of the mice. Just at the moment when the king seems to be getting the upper hand, Marie throws her shoe at him. He dies, and the mice are defeated. The nutcracker is transformed into a handsome Prince. He thanks his rescuer and takes her to his magic kingdom. They fly over a wintry forest to the mountain of sweetmeats, where the Fairy Dragée rules over the lollypops and goodies."

THE HARVARD GLEE CLUB

Which will sing at the Pops on Harvard Night (June 1)

There is as much difference between the Harvard Glee Club and the general run of glee clubs as between a fine violinist and a mandolin picker. The idea of real musical accomplishment has simply never occurred to other college singing societies. Dr. (and also Assistant Professor) Archibald T. Davison may be thanked for the idea and for its realization. Having taken the Harvard College course in the years 1902–06, Dr. Davison studied music also as a graduate, and the organ in particular under Widor in Paris. He began to teach at Harvard in 1908, and since 1910 has been organist and choirmaster of the college chapel. His "Tragic Overture" was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in April, 1918.

Dr. Davison has developed the Glee Club, despite its yearly changes of personnel, into as illustrious and finely perfected a male chorus as you could find anywhere. He has genuinely interested them in the best music as well as the lighter sort, and taught them to bring out all its beauties. Thus equipped, they have sung publicly in Cambridge and in Boston on different occasions, appearing jointly with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Muck and under Mr. Monteux. Last winter they made a successful tour of Philadelphia, Washington, Cincinnati, Detroit, Cleveland, and Vassar. Wherever they have sung this amateur choir has moved the "connoiseurs" to enthusiastic praise of their eloquence and sensitive response to the sublest balance and shading. Next winter during the Christmas recess they plan to journey to California and sing in the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

Dry Cold Storage

Furs and fur trimmed apparel, like fine jewelry, when not worn, should be protected from all damaging elements. But furs, unlike jewelry, are subjected to the ravages of the moth worm, fire and weather. Dry Cold Storage therefore, and a thorough cleansing are necessary for their preservation. With their high value and increasing cost, protection becomes doubly necessary.

Hovey's Storage Service includes:

Books and People

"On the other hand, it is also true that books have certain advantages which men have not. They are silent when questions are not asked of them; men are seldom so discreet. And books are seldom so inane as people. One feels frequently like applying to the mass of humanity those words of Goethe: 'If they were books, I would not read them.'"

RIMSKY-KORSAKOFF

Nicolai Andreyevich Rimsky-Korsakoff, the Russian composer and professor of music who is always pictured with iron spectacles and a long beard, was born in 1844. His parents, country gentry of moderate means, discovered that their small son showed a remarkable sense of rhythm, performing on his drum, and that with no training whatsoever he possessed "absolute pitch." His early piano teachers, none too competent, did not awaken his stronger musical instincts. Studying in the Petrograd Naval College, he also kept up his music, although his elder brother tried to discourage him. At length his meeting with Balakireff opened up to him an entire new world. The ardent circle of musical nationalists received this promising young disciple with open arms. A three years' cruise, requisite for every budding naval officer, tore him away from his new friends, but he returned to them the more eagerly with an enlarged experience and an acquaintance with the sea which may have inspired the fine sea music in "Sadko" and "Scheherazade." Appointed Director of the Petrograd Conservatory, he was assailed by doubts as to his technical proficiency, and zealously studied counterpoint and instrumentation. This caused his colleagues of the "Invincible Band" to look upon his subsequent compositions, which were of course affected, somewhat askance. But he remained stanchly national and iconoclastic. His best-known works were composed in this period. He died in April, 1908. Rash allusions caused more than one of his operas to be banned by the censor, until his "influence" prevailed. His last opera, "The Golden Cock," caused offence in high quarters on account of the satirization of a weak and fatuous monarch. Its performance was not allowed until after his death.

THE HARVARD GLEE CLUB

There is as much difference between the Harvard Glee Club and the general run of glee clubs as between a fine violinist and a mandolin picker. The idea of real musical accomplishment has simply never occurred to other college singing societies. Dr. (and also Assistant Professor) Archibald T. Davison may be thanked for the idea and for its realization. Having taken the Harvard College course in the years 1902–06, Dr. Davison studied music also as a graduate, and the organ in particular under Widor in Paris. He began to teach at Harvard in 1908, and since 1910 has been organist and choirmaster of the college chapel. His "Tragic Overture" was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in April, 1918.

Dr. Davison has developed the Glee Club, despite its yearly changes of personnel, into as illustrious and finely perfected a male chorus as you could find anywhere. He has genuinely interested them in the best music as well as the lighter sort, and taught them to bring out all its beauties. Thus equipped, they have sung publicly in Cambridge and in Boston on different occasions, appearing jointly with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Muck and under Mr. Monteux. Last winter they made a successful tour of Philadelphia, Washington, Cincinnati, Detroit, Cleveland, and Vassar. Wherever they have sung this amateur choir has moved the "connoiseurs" to enthusiastic praise of their eloquence and sensitive response to the sublest balance and shading. Next winter during the Christmas recess they plan to journey to California and sing in the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

Books and People

"On the other hand, it is also true that books have certain advantages which men have not. They are silent when questions are not asked of them; men are seldom so discreet. And books are seldom so inane as people. One feels frequently like applying to the mass of humanity those words of Goethe: 'If they were books, I would not read them.'"

JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

MOZART'S "GERMAN DANCES"

Succeeding the Chevalier Gluck in 1787 as Court Composer to the Emperor Joseph II (at a considerably reduced salary, for the Emperor was economical), Mozart was ordered to compose numerous dances for the court balls. Among them was the German Dance which, on account of the bells and post horn in the Trio, is called "The Sleigh Ride." Mozart was indeed an indefatigable dancer, and was also fond of the sleigh processions which were then fashionable in Vienna. "These sledges are richly ornamented," wrote Michael Kelley, the tenor, and friend of Mozart, "and carved with all kinds of monsters, inlaid with burnished gold, etc. Snow is previously scattered all along the course, that their runners may always glide smoothly. The effect at night, by torchlight, is like enchantment. I have seen forty or fifty sledges drawn up, one behind the other; in every sledge was seated a lady, covered with diamonds, bundled in furs and pelisses; behind each was a gentleman, as magnificently dressed, driving. Before every sledge there ran two footmen with long, sliver-knobbed poles. The Hungarian Prince, Dietresteen, the Grand Master of the Horse, was always the leader of the traineaux. The immense velocity with which these things are drawn is perfectly astonishing; they drive for three or four hours, and ultimately draw up before the Emperor's palace. The running footmen have costly liveries, and the horses are caparisoned with rich trappings and large plumes of milk-white feathers—on the whole, a magnificent spectacle indeed."

Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

Books and People

"On the other hand, it is also true that books have certain advantages which men have not. They are silent when questions are not asked of them; men are seldom so discreet. And books are seldom so inane as people. One feels frequently like applying to the mass of humanity those words of Goethe: 'If they were books, I would not read them.'"

VERDI AND HIS "OTELLO"

When enemy troops invaded the small Italian town of Le Roncole in 1814, the women sought refuge in the church. They were pursued foully into its sacred precincts, and only one of them who hid in the belfry escaped. In her arms she clasped her infant son—who was Giuseppe Verdi. He first learned the delights of music from a wretched strolling musician, and his humble, kindly father, who kept an inn and shop combined, purchased him a shaky spinet which became his greatest treasure. His talent won him at the age of ten the post of organist in the church at a yearly salary of 36 lira ($7.20)—including the extra fees for weddings and the like! At Busseto he came under the care of the rich musician Busseto, whose daughter he later married. Studying under good masters, he soon became the musical idol of the town. He next moved to Milan, where his advance was rapid. Seized by the passion for drama, his successes with one opera after another were varying, but his ultimate fame unquestionable. The sudden loss of his beloved wife and two children was a severe and tragic shock to him.

"Otello," his last opera but one, was composed at the age of seventy-three, and sixteen years after "Aïda," which preceded it. With these operas he abandoned the formal, undramatic divisions into arias, ensembles, and recitatives, and influenced by Wagner developed a close-knit, fluent, and vital style. The Fantasia opens with Iago's Drinking Song from the first act. Then comes the nobly beautiful "Ave Maria," which is Desdemona's last prayer in the bedroom scene before the final tragedy. A passage for the double basses alone, depicting the sinister Othello, is a landmark in orchestration. Then Iago's satanic Credo, and the music of the close.

RUBINSTEIN AND "KAMMENOI OSTROW"

Born in 1830 of Jewish parents near the Austrian frontier of Russia, Anton Gregor Rubinstein made his way to the public concert stage in 1839, despite the difficulties of persecution to which his family was subjected. At the age of ten he played for Liszt, and this large-hearted "godfather" of promising composers championed the young pianist who was to become his foremost rival. As a composer he was no less industrious than as a concert pianist, and in both capacities his success at every hand was immediate and complete. Having played in every capital of Europe, he toured America in 1872–73. His playing was fire itself, and would sometimes work up to such a wild state of excitement that his technique would lose its marvellous clarity and blur, a fault of which Liszt was never accused. Yet in these very moments the inflammatory Rubinstein would move his audiences the most deeply. A fecund composer in every conceivable form, he was considered a veritable creative giant in his day, and his "Ocean" Symphony was played and worshipped wherever there was an orchestra. Of all this, scarcely anything survives in popularity but an occasional pianoforte concerto and such fragments as the "Melody in F" and the so-called "Rêve Angélique," which is one of twenty-four pieces entitled "Kammenoi Ostrow." Kammenoi Ostrow is a picturesque island on the Neva River. While a guest at the castle of the Russian Grand Duchess Helen on this island, Rubinstein wrote a set of "musical portraits," dedicating one to each of the assembled guests. The character of "Rêve Angélique" suggests that romance was afoot.

Books and People

"On the other hand, it is also true that books have certain advantages which men have not. They are silent when questions are not asked of them; men are seldom so discreet. And books are seldom so inane as people. One feels frequently like applying to the mass of humanity those words of Goethe: 'If they were books, I would not read them.'"

TSCHAIKOWSKY AND MME. VON MECK

Tschaikowsky's dedication of his Fourth Symphony "To my Best Friend" refers to Madame von Meck, a widow of large fortune with whom the composer had a remarkable relationship. As a patroness of music she corresponded with him, and, learning of his financial straits, arranged to send him a yearly sum of six thousand roubles, tactfully insisting that they should never meet. Through thirteen years of intimate friendship they never spoke. Once they encountered accidentally in a grove of her estate, whereupon Tschaikowsky lifted his hat and fled. By letter he became her intimate confidant. Earnestly he consecrated this symphony to her, informing her minutely of its progress as he composed it. "My dear Nadejda Filaretovna," he wrote, "it seems to me that this symphony is the best I have yet made. How glad I am that it is our work, and that you will know when you hear it how much I thought of you in every measure!" And after she had heard its first performance in Moscow, Tschaikowsky wrote from Florence: "I was in thought with you at the concert hall. I had calculated to the minute when the fate theme* would be sounded, and I then endeavored, following all the detail, to imagine what sort of impression the music would make." Mme. von Meck wrote in December, 1890, that she faced bankruptcy, and would have to discontinue the allowance. The letter caused a cruel misunderstanding. "Do you really think me incapable of remembering you, now that I no longer receive your money?" Tschaikowsky answered. For a while he was too wounded to make any further advance. When he did, there was no response. As fate had it, this long friendship was terminated only three years before the composer's death. And she learned the news on her own deathbed.

* The Finale of the Fourth Symphony begins in festive mood, using the Russian folk-tune, "In the Fields there stood a Birch-tree." The vivid theme of fate, recurring from the First Movement, and announced by the full brass choir, ultimately predominates.

SIBELIUS, COMPOSER OF "FINLANDIA"

The music of the living Finnish composer Jan Sibelius is fairly saturated with the spirit and character of his people, most of it being descriptive of one or another part of "Kalevala," the saga of Finland. Yet, according to his own statement, he has never used a folk melody, and every theme in his music is his own. This is even true of "Finlandia," which was so national and so greatly excited the people that the Imperial Russian Government forbade its performance. Sibelius's music is like none other we know. Its weird melancholy sounds strange to Western peoples. The plaintive melodies of Sibelius are unusually striking. "The Finn is more sober in sentiment," writes Rosa Newmarch, "and less easily moved to extremes of despair or boisterous glee than his Russian neighbor. . . . The causes of this innate gravity and restrained melancholy are not far to seek. This most northern of civilized countries lies from November until the end of March in the thrall of a gripping and relentless winter, entirely without sun in December and January. Every yard of cultivated soil represents a strenuous conflict with adverse natural conditions. Situated between Sweden and Russia, Finland came for years under the alternate oppression of those conflicting nations, in wars which exhausted the Finns without entirely sapping their fund of stubborn strength and passive endurance. And their instinct of liberty has remained throughout unconquerable—self-reliant."

"On the other hand, it is also true that books have certain advantages which men have not. They are silent when questions are not asked of them; men are seldom so discreet. JOHANN STRAUSS, "THE WALTZ KING"

The phenomenon of music by generations was not confined to the family of Bachs. Johann Strauss (1804–49) made a world reputation with his waltzes, travelling everywhere with his orchestra, and serving for years as court musician in Vienna, his native city. He was determined that his three sons should not follow his profession, but they studied music secretly from boyhood, and ultimately Edward, Joseph, and Johann, Jr. had each his own orchestra and his own fame. Johann 3d, son of Edward, is also a waltz writer and conductor of distinction. Between them, the Strausses have composed over a thousand dances. Edward brought his orchestra to Boston Music Hall in 1890. But the real "Waltz King" was his brother Johann (1825–99), the composer of the "Blue Danube." Succeeding his father at the Royal Court Balls of Vienna, he would introduce a new waltz at each of those functions. He would conduct violin in hand, and, according to the family tradition, swing into the lilt of the music at supreme moments, with marvellous grace and abandon (it was gossiped that each Strauss learned to play before a mirror). The enraptured and clamorous ladies would crowd around and shower him with flowers. Next day, the new waltz would be whistled on every street in Vienna. There is a story that one lady requested that the "Blue Danube" be played at her funeral, and was accordingly lowered into her grave to its strains. For the Boston World Peace Jubilee in 1872, Johann Strauss crossed the ocean and conducted this waltz in Mechanics Hall with "20,000 voices, 300 musicians, cannon fired by electricity, 100 anvils, etc."

AGIDE JACCHIA (born December 5, 1875) became a favorite pupil of Mascagni at an early age in the Pesaro Conservatory, and has been his lifelong friend and admirer, conducting all of the composer's operas in many parts of the world. Graduating at the age of twenty-three with a first prize for his cantata, "Inno a Rossini," Mr. Jacchia made an immediate mark as a conductor in Brescia, and subsequently in Milan and Rome. He first came to this country with Mascagni's Opera Company, which gave concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, and opera in the old Music Hall. In Italy again, Mr. Jacchia conducted many important operas in all the large cities, and returning to America, he toured the United States, Canada, and Central America with the Milan Opera Company. He aroused enormous patriotic fervor by composing the National Hymn of Central America, and dedicating it to the President of the Republic of Guatemala. He next had a successful season at the Academy of Music in New York, and during the following four years (1910–14) he was General Music Director of the Montreal Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada, successively. During the season of 1914–15 he was principal Italian conductor at the Century Theatre in New York. Thence he joined the Boston National Opera Company which toured the United States in the season of 1915–16. This is Mr. Jacchia's fourth season at the Pops.

"I heard yesterday—will you believe it?—the masterpiece of Bizet for the twentieth time. How such a work completes one! Through it, one almost becomes a 'masterpiece' oneself.—And, as a matter of fact, each time I heard Carmen it seemed to me that I was more of a philosopher, a better philosopher than at other times: I became so forbearing, so happy, so Indian, so settled. . . . Whereas that other orchestration which is all the rage at present—the Wagnerian—affects me terribly. I call it Sirocco. A disagreeable sweat breaks out all over me. My fine weather vanishes. But Bizet's music seems to me perfect. It approaches nimbly, amiably, and does not produce sweat. What is good is easy—everything divine runs on light feet: this is the first principle of my æsthetics. This music is wicked, refined, fatalistic. . . . With Carmen one takes leave of the humid north, and all the steam of the Wagnerian ideal. It possesses first of all the dryness of air in a warm climate—it limpidezza. Il faut méditéraniser la musique. Its love is not the love of Wagner's 'cultured maidens'! But love as fate, as fatality, cynical, innocent, cruel—and thus true to nature. Love whose very essence is mortal hatred and the war of the sexes. Nowhere is the tragic irony, which is the kernel of love, expressed in so severe and terrible a formula as in the last cry of Don José at the close of the opera—'Yes! It is I who have killed her! O my Carmen—my Carmen adored!'

. . . "And yet I was one of the most corrupted Wagnerites—I was able to take Wagner seriously. Oh, this old magician! what tricks has he not played upon us! The first thing his art places in our hands is a magnifying glass: we look through it, and we no longer trust our own eyes. Everything grows bigger, even Wagner grows bigger. What a clever rattlesnake. Throughout his life he rattled 'redemption' in our ears (he is always saving some one in his operas)—also 'loyalty' and 'purity,' and he retired from the corrupt world with a song of praise to chastity. And we believed it all!"

GRIEG AND "PEER GYNT"

The Norwegian folk-legend of Peer Gynt brought Norway's greatest writer and her greatest composer together. When Henrik Ibsen dramatized his poem of the same name, he asked Edvard Grieg to furnish incidental music to the play. Grieg complied, and afterwards divided his music into two suites for concert use.

Peer Gynt, the romantic hero of mythology, leaves his devoted mother Aase and his faithful sweetheart Solveg, and spends his life wandering over all parts of the earth, and meeting with every kind of fantastic adventure. However, he is beside his aged mother when she dies, a touching episode of the play.

In Morocco he comes upon a wild tribe of Bedouins, and is entranced by the graceful dancing of Anitra, the chief's daughter. At another time he makes his way into a remarkable cave in a mountainside. It is the palace of the king of the trolls, a race of gnomes who live underground. When Peer woos the king's daughter, the whole population drive him out amid an uproar which the music suggests, leaping on his back, and nearly making an end of him. At last he returns home, an old man, to find that Solveg his sweetheart has been waiting for him trustingly through all these years.

THE HUNGARIAN DANCES OF BRAHMS

In the early spring of 1853, a youthful Hungarian exile and violinist extraordinary, Edward Remenyi, found himself the idol of Hamburg society. In response to his inquiry for an accompanist, a youth of twenty knocked at the door of his rooms, and introduced himself as Johannes Brahms. In the course of the evening, Brahms played one of his piano sonatas for his new friend. "My dear Brahms," exclaimed Remenyi, enraptured, "you are a genius!" "I wish the good people of Hamburg thought so," replied Brahms, with his melancholy smile. They did not leave the piano until four in the morning. Rehearsals and engagements were forgotten. When Remenyi presented his "discovery" to the Hamburgers, the Hamburgers, bored, dropped them both. Undaunted, Remenyi suggested a joint tour, which they immediately undertook. Writing their own announcements, they journeyed from town to town with varying success, sometimes reaping as little as five dollars at a concert. Thus they paid their way to Weimar and the shrine of Liszt. That master was struck by the lad's music. But while Liszt was playing, Brahms was caught dozing—an unpardonable offence. After this friction he felt constrained to leave, nor did his path ever cross Remenyi's again. This is hardly surprising, for the reticent, sensitive composer and the rather worldly violin virtuoso must have made an incongruous pair. Brahms carried with him to Hanover a letter of introduction to Joachim, the great violinist, and Joachim introduced him in turn to Robert Schumann. Both of these musicians became his lifelong friends. Schumann in the following October proclaimed to the world in print that he had found a veritable genius. Thus did the "gypsy" violinist help Brahms to fame while providing him with some valuable thematic material, for the themes of the Hungarian Dances were undoubtedly revealed to Brahms on that memorable tour, when Remenyi played several popular Hungarian Czardas at each concert. Of course, Brahms's treatment of the themes was an integral part of their success.

TSCHAIKOWSKY'S "1812" OVERTURE

The dedication of the Church of the Redeemer at Moscow, in 1881, was the occasion for this Overture. It celebrates the famous year when the invading army of Napoleon was repulsed at Borodino, and the fortunes of war at last turned in favor of the Russians. It was to be performed in the public square before the church by a colossal orchestra; church bells were to be used, and the bass drum part was to be replaced by cannon. The score indicates the following instruments of percussion: three kettledrums, bass drum, snare drum, cymbals, triangle, tambourine, two large bells, and cannon shots with a full brass band ad libitum for the coda.

The music begins largo with the Russian Hymn "God, Preserve Thy People." The pace quickens with the intrusion of a stormy development. Then comes the tempestuous principal theme. Fragments of the "Marsellaise" alternate with a quieter Cossack theme, characterizing the Russian hosts. The French hymn is worked up to the verge of a triumphant climax, when it is submerged in a mighty orchestral storm. The original theme of the largo recurs in majestic fashion, and simultaneously the Russian Hymn of Lvoff is thundered forth. Tschaikowsky has been accused of anachronism, since the "Marsellaise" was not in favor during the first Empire, nor was Lvoff's Hymn composed until twenty-seven years later. Yet the associations of the two airs probably aroused the intended emotions in the listeners of 1881.

BERLIOZ'S RÁKÓCZY MARCH

When Berlioz, the romantic French composer, visited Budapest, he chose the popular Rákóczy theme with which to write a march for performance at his own concert there. His acquaintances feared that the Hungarians would consider their national theme desecrated, and make a scene. But Berlioz was confident. The beginning, unusually quiet for a march, caused a restless surprise, which might have been resentment. But as the music gradually worked up, with drum-beats like distant cannon, to a furious climax, patriotic fervor ran so high that Berlioz and the orchestra, confused by the clamor, had to go back to the beginning and start over again.

"Afterwards in the little room behind the stage," so writes Berlioz in his Memoirs, "a poorly dressed man with a strangely excited face dropped in upon me unawares, and embraced me, with his eyes full of tears. With difficulty he stammered out these words:—

"'Ah, sir! sir! I Hungarian—poor fellow—not speak French—un poco l'Italiano. Forgive my ecstasy. Ah, I understand your cannon. Yes, yes—the great battle—German dogs!' and striking himself a great blow on the chest with his fist—'In my heart here I shall bear you—ah, you Frenchman—you revolutionist—you do know how to make revolutionary music!'"

AGIDE JACCHIA (born December 5, 1875) became a favorite pupil of Mascagni at an early age in the Pesaro Conservatory, and has been his lifelong friend and admirer, conducting all of the composer's operas in many parts of the world. Graduating at the age of twenty-three with a first prize for his cantata, "Inno a Rossini," Mr. Jacchia made an immediate mark as a conductor in Brescia, and subsequently in Milan and Rome. He first came to this country with Mascagni's Opera Company, which gave concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, and opera in the old Music Hall. In Italy again, Mr. Jacchia conducted many important operas in all the large cities, and returning to America, he toured the United States, Canada, and Central America with the Milan Opera Company. He aroused enormous patriotic fervor by composing the National Hymn of Central America, and dedicating it to the President of the Republic of Guatemala. He next had a successful season at the Academy of Music in New York, and during the following four years (1910–14) he was General Music Director of the Montreal Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada, successively. During the season of 1914–15 he was principal Italian conductor at the Century Theatre in New York. Thence he joined the Boston National Opera Company which toured the United States in the season of 1915–16. This is Mr. Jacchia's fourth season at the Pops.

TECHNOLOGY NIGHT
AT THE
POPS

TAKE ME BACK TO TECH

I wish that I were back again
 At that Tech on Boylston Street,
Dressed in my dinky uniform,
 So dapper and so neat.
I'm crazy after Calculus—
 I never had enough.
It was hard to be dragged away so young;
 It was horribly, awfully tough.
Oh, give me some 'Ology, 'Ology, tra-la-la-la-la,
 Any old kind of 'Ology,
Tra-la-la-la-la-la-la-la-la-la.

Chorus

Take me back on a special train
 To the glorious Institute—
I yearn for the inspiration of
 A technological toot!
I'd shun the physical, quizzical Prof.,
 And chapel, and all that;
But how I would love again to go
 On a Scientific Bat!

Oh, back to the days that were free from care,
 In the 'Ology 'Varsity shop,
With nothing to do but analyze air
 In an anemometrical top;
Or the differentiation
 Of the trigonometric powers
Of the constant pi that made me sigh
 In those happy days of ours.
'Rah for TECHNOLOGY!
 'Ology, 'Ology, oh!
Glorious old TECHNOLOGY!
 'Ology, 'Ology, 'Ology, 'Ology!

Chorus

'Rah for TECHNOLOGY, etc.

DEAR OLD M. I. T.

The sun with glowing crimson
 Has ting'd the sky's dull gray;
The glory of the sunset
 Uplifts our flag to-day;
While here beneath our colors,
 With hearts that never yield,
Our boys are fighting onward,
 Fighting onward 'cross the field.

(OVER)

Chorus!

Fight on, boys, we are cheering for you,
And we want you to win to-day;
Do your best, we are all behind you,
And you're wearing the red and gray.
Though the odds may be great against you,
Full of sturdy courage be;
And we'll raise a song of victory
For dear old M. I. T.

Before old Harvard's crimson,
Before the rose of Brown,
Before the green of Dartmouth,
Our colors will not down;
Though Amherst's white and purple
Bid the Red and Gray to yield,
Our cheer, still strong and clear, boys,
Will ring across the field.

Chorus

On the days that are before us
We will gather as of yore,
And raise in swelling chorus
The grand old cheer once more.
And when the battle's over,
Then at the close of day,
Once again we'll raise our colors;
Victory crowns the Red and Gray.

A STEIN SONG

Give a rouse, then, in the May-time,
For a life that knows no fear!
Turn the night-time into daytime
With the sunlight of good cheer!
For it's always fair weather
When good fellows get together,
With a stein on the table,
And a good song ringing clear.

Chorus

For it's always fair weather
When good fellows get together,
With a stein on the table,
And a good song ringing clear.

Oh, we're all frank and twenty
When the spring is in the air;
And we've faith and hope a-plenty,
And we've life and love to spare;
And its birds of a feather
When good fellows get together,
With a stein on the table,
And a heart without a care.

Chorus

And it's birds of a feather
When good fellows get together,
With a stein on the table,
And a heart without a care.

For we know the world is glorious,
And the goal a golden thing,
And that God is not censorious
When his children have their fling;
And life slips its tether
When good fellows get together,
With a stein on the table,
In the fellowship of spring.

Books and People

"On the other hand, it is also true that books have certain advantages which men have not. They are silent when questions are not asked of them; men are seldom so discreet. And books are seldom so inane as people. One feels frequently like applying to the mass of humanity those words of Goethe: 'If they were books, I would not read them.'"

THE HUNGARIAN DANCES OF BRAHMS

In the early spring of 1853, a youthful Hungarian exile and violinist extraordinary, Edward Remenyi, found himself the idol of Hamburg society. In response to his inquiry for an accompanist, a youth of twenty knocked at the door of his rooms, and introduced himself as Johannes Brahms. In the course of the evening, Brahms played one of his piano sonatas for his new friend. "My dear Brahms," exclaimed Remenyi, enraptured, "you are a genius!" "I wish the good people of Hamburg thought so," replied Brahms, with his melancholy smile. They did not leave the piano until four in the morning. Rehearsals and engagements were forgotten. When Remenyi presented his "discovery" to the Hamburgers, the Hamburgers, bored, dropped them both. Undaunted, Remenyi suggested a joint tour, which they immediately undertook. Writing their own announcements, they journeyed from town to town with varying success, sometimes reaping as little as five dollars at a concert. Thus they paid their way to Weimar and the shrine of Liszt. That master was struck by the lad's music. But while Liszt was playing, Brahms was caught dozing—an unpardonable offence. After this friction he felt constrained to leave, nor did his path ever cross Remenyi's again. This is hardly surprising, for the reticent, sensitive composer and the rather worldly violin virtuoso must have made an incongruous pair. Brahms carried with him to Hanover a letter of introduction to Joachim, the great violinist, and Joachim introduced him in turn to Robert Schumann. Both of these musicians became his lifelong friends. Schumann in the following October proclaimed to the world in print that he had found a veritable genius. Thus did the "gypsy" violinist help Brahms to fame while providing him with some valuable thematic material, for the themes of the Hungarian Dances were undoubtedly revealed to Brahms on that memorable tour, when Remenyi played several popular Hungarian Czardas at each concert. Of course, Brahms's treatment of the themes was an integral part of their success.

TANNHÄUSER IN PARIS

In 1861, when "Tannhäuser" was first produced at Paris, Wagner had not yet "arrived"—this in spite of the fact that he was forty-eight, and had composed all of his music dramas but three. A political exile from Germany for twelve years, he had never heard "Lohengrin," for performances had been given in German cities only. When the Princess Metternich prevailed upon the Emperor Napoleon to command "Tannhäuser" produced at the Grand Opera, sparing no expense, fortune seemed about to smile at last. But conductor, singers, and ballet director were obstinately uncomprehensive of Wagner's revolutionary methods. By refusing to introduce a ballet in the second act, and by exhausting the cast with 164 rehearsals, the determined but distraught composer made many enemies. He did concede a Bacchanale, to be danced in the Venusberg at the opening, but this was no sop to society, who seldom came into their boxes before the second act. Wagner thus incurred the wrath of the so-called "Jockey Club," which broke up three performances by organized demonstrations, and forced "Tannhäuser" from the stage. Catcalls, penny whistles, and brawls were their weapons. The indignant counter-applause of the audiences only increased the confusion of the singers and orchestra, none too at ease in their strange parts. At any rate, the music was lost in the din. Even the Emperor and the Empress in their box were powerless. It is related that the Princess Metternich, in mortification and grief, unwittingly tore her handsome fan into small bits. The press took sides with the foppish clique which had made the trouble. But France's foremost musicians and poets were Wagner's ardent champions.

Books and People

"On the other hand, it is also true that books have certain advantages which men have not. They are silent when questions are not asked of them; men are seldom so discreet. THE STORY OF THE "VALSE TRISTE"

This waltz, which was written by Sibelius, the living Finnish composer, as incidental music to the drama "Kuolema" ("Death"), pictures the last delirium of a dying mother. "It is night. The woman's son, wearied by watching over her, has fallen asleep. The room becomes suffused with a reddish light. Music is heard in the distance which sounds nearer and louder with the increasing light, and at last it becomes a waltz melody. The mother awakes, leaves her bed, and, clothed in a gown that looks like a white ball dress, moves about lightly and noiselessly while in the waltz measure she beckons on all sides. To her beckoning appear men and women in couples. She mingles in these dances, and endeavors to fasten the eyes of the dancers on her, but they seem to avoid her. Her strength gives way; she sinks exhausted. The music stops, the reddish shimmer disappears, and with it the dancers. Once more she summons all her strength and again with lively beckonings invites them to dance. Again the music sounds, again the dancing pairs are seen. There is mad dancing, and when the wildness is at its height, there is a knock on the door. The door opens—the mother shrieks—she stands as one frozen—the apparitions vanish—the music is still—through the door enters—Death."

THE "INVITATION TO THE DANCE"

Carl Maria von Weber wrote a "Rondo Brilliant" for the pianoforte in 1819, which he dedicated to "Caroline," his wife, and called "Invitation to the Dance." Weber's wife related how the great composer and pianist played the rondo to her, meanwhile explaining the meaning of each musical phrase. "First approach of the dancer—evasive reply of the lady—his warmer and more urgent appeal—her acceptance this time of his proposal. Now they talk together—he begins, she answers—he speaks with more passionate expression—she agrees more responsively. Now the dancing has begun. He speaks of it—she answers—they take their position together, await the accent, and begin. At the end, her thanks—his answer—stillness."

When Weber's "Der Freischütz" was to be mounted in Paris in 1841, M. Pillet, the Director of the "Opéra," came to Berlioz to write a ballet for it. This Weber enthusiast would not even consider such a desecration, but when Pillet threatened to withdraw the opera, Berlioz solved the dilemma by orchestrating the little rondo to be danced according to the programme indicated above.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

RIMSKY-KORSAKOFF

Nicolai Andreyevich Rimsky-Korsakoff, the Russian composer and professor of music who is always pictured with iron spectacles and a long beard, was born in 1844. His parents, country gentry of moderate means, discovered that their small son showed a remarkable sense of rhythm, performing on his drum, and that with no training whatsoever he possessed "absolute pitch." His early piano teachers, none too competent, did not awaken his stronger musical instincts. Studying in the Petrograd Naval College, he also kept up his music, although his elder brother tried to discourage him. At length his meeting with Balakireff opened up to him an entire new world. The ardent circle of musical nationalists received this promising young disciple with open arms. A three years' cruise, requisite for every budding naval officer, tore him away from his new friends, but he returned to them the more eagerly with an enlarged experience and an acquaintance with the sea which may have inspired the fine sea music in "Sadko" and "Scheherazade." Appointed Director of the Petrograd Conservatory, he was assailed by doubts as to his technical proficiency, and zealously studied counterpoint and instrumentation. This caused his colleagues of the "Invincible Band" to look upon his subsequent compositions, which were of course affected, somewhat askance. But he remained stanchly national and iconoclastic. His best-known works were composed in this period. He died in April, 1908. Rash allusions caused more than one of his operas to be banned by the censor, until his "influence" prevailed. His last opera, "The Golden Cock," caused offence in high quarters on account of the satirization of a weak and fatuous monarch. Its performance was not allowed until after his death.

THE EARLY FORTUNES OF "LOHENGRIN"

Wagner completed "Lohengrin" in August, 1847, and when he was declared a political exile after the revolution of the following year, he despaired of having it performed, and laid it aside—reluctantly, we may be certain, for he had put his heart into the characters of Elsa and Lohengrin. He wrote how, while at Paris, "My eye fell on the score of my 'Lohengrin' which I had almost forgotten. A pitiful feeling came over me that these tones would never sound from the deathly pale paper: two words I wrote to Liszt, the answer to which was nothing less than the information that the most elaborate production was planned at the Weimar Opera." This was entirely Liszt's doing, and that master, who was then as famous as Wagner was obscure, directed every rehearsal with a zealot's fidelity. "Of course," he wrote to his friend, "we shall not omit a note or comma of your work, respecting to our utmost ability its immaculate beauty." Liszt was indeed carried away by "this wonderful score," but the daring orchestral coloring made him apprehensive of its success. Wagner characteristically answered, "We must dare," and would have further carried out the maxim by venturing to Weimar in disguise to witness the first performance, had not Liszt's prudence restrained him. Afterwards Liszt wrote of the score in the highest rapture, but could truly call it nothing more than a "comparative success." Since it was not given outside of Germany for some years, Wagner had no opportunity to hear "Lohengrin" until his pardon and return to Germany in 1861.

HOW GOLDMARK BECAME FAMOUS

Before composing his Oriental overture to "Sakuntala," Carl Goldmark (1830–1915), born in Hungary and the son of a poor Jewish cantor, was none too prominent. Studying in Vienna when the revolution of 1848 closed the Conservatory there, he was condemned as a rebel and led out to be shot, when a friend identified and rescued him. Forced to fiddle for a living, he played in small orchestras at a preliminary salary of $3.50 a month. He would jot down original themes that came to him during the intermissions, and afterwards work them out at home during the rest of the night. At length he submitted his "Sakuntala" overture to the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, wherein he was then playing. It was the custom of the Orchestra, when receiving a new manuscript score, to rehearse it once and then vote on its worthiness to be performed. On these occasions no one else, not even the composer, was allowed to be present. Goldmark's friend Bachrich managed, however, to conceal himself in the empty auditorium. "His heart beat violently when it began. When it was over, an unusual thing happened. The players themselves broke into enthusiastic applause, and the conductor, Dessof, exclaimed, 'No need of voting on this!' Bachrich had heard enough. As fast as his legs could carry him, he ran to the near-by café where the anxious composer was waiting. He was so out of breath when he got there that he could not utter a word, but nodded 'Yes—yes—yes!' And the composer understood and rejoiced."

HANDEL'S "LARGO"

For the opening scene of his opera "Xerxes," Handel wrote a simple aria which has become popularly known as the "Largo" through an orchestral arrangement which Hellmesberger made about a century later. The melody as the great composer conceived it had none of the solemn pretensions of the "Largo." It is a naïve song in which Xerxes (a soprano or male soprano!) praises a plane-tree in the centre of the stage: "Tender and beautiful leaves of my beloved plane-tree, splendid your destiny! Thunder, lightnings, and tempests never disturb your dear peace, nor does the greedy south wind join in violating it. There never was sweeter shade from a dear and lovely plant."

Perhaps no single melody has appealed to so many people as this one. It has made its way through all lands, and survived the fashions and changing tastes of nearly two hundred years. Rolland speaks thus of Handel's melodic genius: "With what art did Handel always know how to define his melodies, to disengage the fine line, to make the most of the pure timbres of each instrument and each voice—now isolated, now united—and also the silences! The contour of his melodies is more varied than is generally believed. Continually using the most elemental verse form, his short, simple, touching, almost naked airs, in which the pure soul speaks, are characteristic of him. He seems to return deliberately to these airs in his last operas." ("Xerxes" is one of these.)

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

CHABRIER'S ESPAÑA

Chabrier sketched his Rhapsody during a visit to Spain in 1882. Lamoureux persuaded Chabrier to orchestrate the earlier two-piano version, and when he rehearsed "España" for its first performance no one thought success possible. The score, with its wild originality, its novel effects, frightened the players. But the popularity of the piece was instantaneous. "España" is based on two Spanish dances, the Jota, vigorous and fiery, and the Malagueñ, languorous and sensual. It is said that only the rude theme of the trombones is Chabrier's own, the rest he gleaned from one or another part of Spain.

Visiting the dance halls of Seville at night, and making musical notes, he wrote home thus: "These eyes, these flowers in the admirable heads of hair, these shawls knotted about the body, these feet striking varied rhythms, these arms that run shivering the length of a body always in motion, these undulations of the hands, the brilliant smiles—and all this to the cry of Olle! Olle! Anda la Maria! The two guitarists, cigarette in mouth, keep gravely scratching something or other. The cries of the women excite the dancer, who becomes literally mad of her body.—Ah! It was a fine thing to see the Andalusians twisting their hips to the beat of Anda! Anda! and clapping their hands. There was a most curious blend of rhythms. I have noted it all—but what a trade, my children!"

HANDEL'S "LARGO"

For the opening scene of his opera "Xerxes," Handel wrote a simple aria which has become popularly known as the "Largo" through an orchestral arrangement which Hellmesberger made about a century later. The melody as the great composer conceived it had none of the solemn pretensions of the "Largo." It is a naïve song in which Xerxes (a soprano or male soprano!) praises a plane-tree in the centre of the stage: "Tender and beautiful leaves of my beloved plane-tree, splendid your destiny! Thunder, lightnings, and tempests never disturb your dear peace, nor does the greedy south wind join in violating it. There never was sweeter shade from a dear and lovely plant."

Perhaps no single melody has appealed to so many people as this one. It has made its way through all lands, and survived the fashions and changing tastes of nearly two hundred years. Rolland speaks thus of Handel's melodic genius: "With what art did Handel always know how to define his melodies, to disengage the fine line, to make the most of the pure timbres of each instrument and each voice—now isolated, now united—and also the silences! The contour of his melodies is more varied than is generally believed. Continually using the most elemental verse form, his short, simple, touching, almost naked airs, in which the pure soul speaks, are characteristic of him. He seems to return deliberately to these airs in his last operas." ("Xerxes" is one of these.)

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

THE ORIGIN OF THE POPS

In the summer of 1885, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra was four years old, the project was started of a post-winter series of concerts in somewhat lighter vein to suit the time of year. Popularity and sociability soon became the key-note of these concerts, in furtherance of which the formal rows of seats were removed, tables installed, and "beers, wines, and light viands" served, according to the way of the "Promenade Concerts" in Europe. The old Music Hall, the original home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which stood on the present site of the Orpheum Theatre on Tremont Street was consequently transformed in the warm weather into scenes of gayety, upon which the bronze Beethoven, looming before the organ, nightly frowned. These "Promenade Concerts" soon came to be called "Pops" in the vernacular, whether on account of their popularity or their popping corks has never been established. In any case the name itself became so popular that it was officially adopted. The orchestra was smaller in those days, and the programmes lighter. Accordingly, more attention was paid to other things—clothes, and conversation, and beer. Excepting a single summer, the Pops have flourished season after season ever since. When Music Hall was demolished in the summer of 1900, the Pops were held for a season in Mechanics Hall, for Symphony Hall, then being built as the new home of the Orchestra, was not quite ready for occupancy.

"I heard yesterday—will you believe it?—the masterpiece of Bizet for the twentieth time. How such a work completes one! Through it, one almost becomes a 'masterpiece' oneself.—And, as a matter of fact, each time I heard Carmen it seemed to me that I was more of a philosopher, a better philosopher than at other times: I became so forbearing, so happy, so Indian, so settled. . . . Whereas that other orchestration which is all the rage at present—the Wagnerian—affects me terribly. I call it Sirocco. A disagreeable sweat breaks out all over me. My fine weather vanishes. But Bizet's music seems to me perfect. It approaches nimbly, amiably, and does not produce sweat. What is good is easy—everything divine runs on light feet: this is the first principle of my æsthetics. This music is wicked, refined, fatalistic. . . . With Carmen one takes leave of the humid north, and all the steam of the Wagnerian ideal. It possesses first of all the dryness of air in a warm climate—it limpidezza. Il faut méditéraniser la musique. Its love is not the love of Wagner's 'cultured maidens'! But love as fate, as fatality, cynical, innocent, cruel—and thus true to nature. Love whose very essence is mortal hatred and the war of the sexes. Nowhere is the tragic irony, which is the kernel of love, expressed in so severe and terrible a formula as in the last cry of Don José at the close of the opera—'Yes! It is I who have killed her! O my Carmen—my Carmen adored!'

. . . "And yet I was one of the most corrupted Wagnerites—I was able to take Wagner seriously. Oh, this old magician! what tricks has he not played upon us! The first thing his art places in our hands is a magnifying glass: we look through it, and we no longer trust our own eyes. Everything grows bigger, even Wagner grows bigger. What a clever rattlesnake. Throughout his life he rattled 'redemption' in our ears (he is always saving some one in his operas)—also 'loyalty' and 'purity,' and he retired from the corrupt world with a song of praise to chastity. And we believed it all!"

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

BIZET, DAUDET, AND "L'ARLÉSIENNE"

The two "L'Arlésienne" suites are selected from the incidental music which Bizet wrote for Alphonse Daudet's play of the same name. The first performance, in Paris in 1872, was coolly received, and Bizet was accused of imitating the then unpopular Wagner. Nor did its revival in 1885 meet with any success. "Public cold, icy cold," wrote Edmond de Goncourt, describing the occasion. "Mme. Daudet beats her fan about her with the angry rustling of the wings of fighting birds. Audience still cold, ready to titter and sneer at the piece. It applauds the music enthusiastically. Suddenly Mme. Daudet, who is leaning in a state of pitiful depression against the side of her box, exclaims: 'I'm going home to bed. It makes me sick to stay here.' Thank God, with the third act the piece goes, and finally brings loud applause." But the zealous Zola wrote of it: "The clever dramatists had better not smile when they speak of Alphonse Daudet as a dramatic author. For he will bury them all a hundred years hence with 'L'Arlésienne.' Such is the consolation of true writers. They have the centuries to come to prove them right. One may despise them as he pleases. They remain erect, and impose themselves at last. They live." The tale is of Frederi, a young farmer, who becomes violently infatuated with a beauty of Arles when she dances the farandole. Told that she is entirely without morals and unworthy to be his wife, he tries to forget her. He makes love to the virtuous maiden Vivetto, but cannot subdue his passion for the other, whose haunting spectre makes jealousy and dissention between them. Frenzied one night by the sounds of the farandole, the lover hurls himself from his garret window.

HOW THE NEW WORLD AFFECTED DVOŘÁK

The years 1892–95 Antónin Dvořák spent in the United States, and during that time composed his symphony "From the New World." He had been deeply interested in the music of our negroes and Indians, and after his death a lengthy and rather fruitless controversy arose as to how much negro "folk-song" the symphony contains. The dispute rose to such a pitch that William Ritter, a Parisian critic, thought to decide it by writing lengthy documents to the two surviving brothers of the composer, asking them eleven questions point blank as to the origin of Dvořák themes. The answers were in effect that, although plainly influenced by the character of American negro melody, Dvořák's themes were emphatically his own. The insatiable Ritter then wrote to every known friend of the composer, putting similar questions. But all that Ritter proved was that such fine points can never be conclusively settled—over a composer's grave. The syncopated "catch" of the spirituals is evident enough in the principal themes—the Czechish blood of the composer is even more apparent in all parts. Some claim that the Largo depicts Hiawatha's longing, from Longfellow's poem; others claim that it is the lament of a homesick Czech. On this point the composer left no verbal clue. Its plaintive theme is sung by the mellow-toned English horn.

RUBINSTEIN AND "KAMMENOI OSTROW"

Born in 1830 of Jewish parents near the Austrian frontier of Russia, Anton Gregor Rubinstein made his way to the public concert stage in 1839, despite the difficulties of persecution to which his family was subjected. At the age of ten he played for Liszt, and this large-hearted "godfather" of promising composers championed the young pianist who was to become his foremost rival. As a composer he was no less industrious than as a concert pianist, and in both capacities his success at every hand was immediate and complete. Having played in every capital of Europe, he toured America in 1872–73. His playing was fire itself, and would sometimes work up to such a wild state of excitement that his technique would lose its marvellous clarity and blur, a fault of which Liszt was never accused. Yet in these very moments the inflammatory Rubinstein would move his audiences the most deeply. A fecund composer in every conceivable form, he was considered a veritable creative giant in his day, and his "Ocean" Symphony was played and worshipped wherever there was an orchestra. Of all this, scarcely anything survives in popularity but an occasional pianoforte concerto and such fragments as the "Melody in F" and the so-called "Rêve Angélique," which is one of twenty-four pieces entitled "Kammenoi Ostrow." Kammenoi Ostrow is a picturesque island on the Neva River. While a guest at the castle of the Russian Grand Duchess Helen on this island, Rubinstein wrote a set of "musical portraits," dedicating one to each of the assembled guests. The character of "Rêve Angélique" suggests that romance was afoot.

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

THE ORIGIN OF THE POPS

In the summer of 1885, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra was four years old, the project was started of a post-winter series of concerts in somewhat lighter vein to suit the time of year. Popularity and sociability soon became the key-note of these concerts, in furtherance of which the formal rows of seats were removed, tables installed, and "beers, wines, and light viands" served, according to the way of the "Promenade Concerts" in Europe. The old Music Hall, the original home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which stood on the present site of the Orpheum Theatre on Tremont Street was consequently transformed in the warm weather into scenes of gayety, upon which the bronze Beethoven, looming before the organ, nightly frowned. These "Promenade Concerts" soon came to be called "Pops" in the vernacular, whether on account of their popularity or their popping corks has never been established. In any case the name itself became so popular that it was officially adopted. The orchestra was smaller in those days, and the programmes lighter. Accordingly, more attention was paid to other things—clothes, and conversation, and beer. Excepting a single summer, the Pops have flourished season after season ever since. When Music Hall was demolished in the summer of 1900, the Pops were held for a season in Mechanics Hall, for Symphony Hall, then being built as the new home of the Orchestra, was not quite ready for occupancy.

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

THE EARLY FORTUNES OF "LOHENGRIN"

Wagner completed "Lohengrin" in August, 1847, and when he was declared a political exile after the revolution of the following year, he despaired of having it performed, and laid it aside—reluctantly, we may be certain, for he had put his heart into the characters of Elsa and Lohengrin. He wrote how, while at Paris, "My eye fell on the score of my 'Lohengrin' which I had almost forgotten. A pitiful feeling came over me that these tones would never sound from the deathly pale paper; two words I wrote to Liszt, the answer to which was nothing less than the information that the most elaborate production was planned at the Weimar Opera." This was entirely Liszt's doing, and that master, who was then as famous as Wagner was obscure, directed every rehearsal with a zealot's fidelity. "Of course," he wrote to his friend, "we shall not omit a note or comma of your work, respecting to our utmost ability its immaculate beauty." Liszt was indeed carried away by "this wonderful score," but the daring orchestral coloring made him apprehensive of its success. Wagner characteristically answered, "We must dare," and would have further carried out the maxim by venturing to Weimar in disguise to witness the first performance, had not Liszt's prudence restrained him. Afterwards Liszt wrote of the score in the highest rapture, but could truly call it nothing more than a "comparative success." Since it was not given outside of Germany for some years, Wagner had no opportunity to hear "Lohengrin" until his pardon and return to Germany in 1861.

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

THE VIOLA D' AMORE

The distinguishing characteristic of the viola d'amore, which was in general use in Europe during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, is a set of fine metal strings which are stretched beneath the seven played strings. These "sympathetic" strings are tuned to the key in which the instrument is to be played, but they are never touched by the bow. Their sole function is to vibrate sympathetically to the sound of the played strings, thus producing a wealth of overtones which give the instrument its peculiarly rich and mellow quality. The romantic name, "viola d' amore" must have come from this delicate response of string to string. The large number of played strings make the instrument especially fine for arpeggios, but they also make it extremely difficult. The musician must also look to his overtones.

The viola d' amore always had the "flaming sword" sound-holes. Good specimens are quite rare, because, not being adaptable to orchestral purposes, it fell into disuse during the last century. Nevertheless, Berlioz spoke highly of it, and Meyerbeer wrote a tenor aria with viola d' amore obbligato in his opera "Les Huguenots."

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

VERDI AND HIS "OTELLO"

When enemy troops invaded the small Italian town of Le Roncole in 1814, the women sought refuge in the church. They were pursued foully into its sacred precincts, and only one of them who hid in the belfry escaped. In her arms she clasped her infant son—who was Giuseppe Verdi. He first learned the delights of music from a wretched strolling musician, and his humble, kindly father, who kept an inn and shop combined, purchased him a shaky spinet which became his greatest treasure. His talent won him at the age of ten the post of organist in the church at a yearly salary of 36 lira ($7.20)—including the extra fees for weddings and the like! At Busseto he came under the care of the rich musician Busseto, whose daughter he later married. Studying under good masters, he soon became the musical idol of the town. He next moved to Milan, where his advance was rapid. Seized by the passion for drama, his successes with one opera after another were varying, but his ultimate fame unquestionable. The sudden loss of his beloved wife and two children was a severe and tragic shock to him.

"Otello," his last opera but one, was composed at the age of seventy-three, and sixteen years after "Aïda," which preceded it. With these operas he abandoned the formal, undramatic divisions into arias, ensembles, and recitatives, and influenced by Wagner developed a close-knit, fluent, and vital style.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

TSCHAIKOWSKY AND MME. VON MECK

Tschaikowsky's dedication of his Fourth Symphony "To my Best Friend" refers to Madame von Meck, a widow of large fortune with whom the composer had a remarkable relationship. As a patroness of music she corresponded with him, and, learning of his financial straits, arranged to send him a yearly sum of six thousand roubles, tactfully insisting that they should never meet. Through thirteen years of intimate friendship they never spoke. Once they encountered accidentally in a grove of her estate, whereupon Tschaikowsky lifted his hat and fled. By letter he became her intimate confidant. Earnestly he consecrated this symphony to her, informing her minutely of its progress as he composed it. "My dear Nadejda Filaretovna," he wrote, "it seems to me that this symphony is the best I have yet made. How glad I am that it is our work, and that you will know when you hear it how much I thought of you in every measure!" And after she had heard its first performance in Moscow, Tschaikowsky wrote from Florence: "I was in thought with you at the concert hall. I had calculated to the minute when the fate theme* would be sounded, and I then endeavored, following all the detail, to imagine what sort of impression the music would make." Mme. von Meck wrote in December, 1890, that she faced bankruptcy, and would have to discontinue the allowance. The letter caused a cruel misunderstanding. "Do you really think me incapable of remembering you, now that I no longer receive your money?" Tschaikowsky answered. For a while he was too wounded to make any further advance. When he did, there was no response. As fate had it, this long friendship was terminated only three years before the composer's death. And she learned the news on her own deathbed.

* The Finale of the Fourth Symphony begins in festive mood, using the Russian folk-tune, "In the Fields there stood a Birch-tree." The vivid theme of fate, recurring from the First Movement, and announced by the full brass choir, ultimately predominates.

THE THIRTY-FIFTH SEASON
NINETEEN HUNDRED TWENTY

You can have a Pop Concert at Home
any Evening with

The AMPICO
Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

JOHN C. MULLALY

To all those who remember music and the theatre in Boston in the eighties, the name of John C. Mullaly will be familiar. The oldest living member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, his service as violinist from 1885 to 1890, and from 1905 to 1913 is but one aspect of his varied career. Born in Newcastle in 1847 of an Irish father and a Scotch mother, he came to the United States and to Boston as a small boy. As a remarkably talented youth of sixteen, he attracted public attention in the Civil War days, leading Gilmore's Band. In the early Seventies he first became a familiar figure conducting orchestras in the Boston Theatre and in the Globe Theatre, which stood on the corner of Essex and Washington Streets. In these theatres and in the old Music Hall (on Tremont Street) he conducted the finest orchestras, and orchestras of very indifferent ability (from the latter he had a reputation for inspiring remarkable results). He directed everything from "Tannhäuser" or "The Dutchman," with the greatest stars of the day, to a burlesque show, and all the intermediate gradations. He conducted the Pops in their second season (1886), when they ran continuously for four months. For twenty-nine summers he was the idol of Newport as the director of the Casino Orchestra there. But Mr. Mullaly's name is primarily connected with the operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan. When the craze for "Patience," "Iolanthe," "Pinafore," "The Yeomen of the Guard," "The Gondolier" and "Mikado" seized every one, Mr. Mullaly was at the fore of the movement, conducting all of them in many cities. He presided over the first American production of "The Pirates of Penzance" in 1888.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

AGIDE JACCHIA (born December 5, 1875) became a favorite pupil of Mascagni at an early age in the Pesaro Conservatory, and has been his lifelong friend and admirer, conducting all of the composer's operas in many parts of the world. Graduating at the age of twenty-three with a first prize for his cantata, "Inno a Rossini," Mr. Jacchia made an immediate mark as a conductor in Brescia, and subsequently in Milan and Rome. He first came to this country with Mascagni's Opera Company, which gave concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, and opera in the old Music Hall. In Italy again, Mr. Jacchia conducted many important operas in all the large cities, and returning to America, he toured the United States, Canada, and Central America with the Milan Opera Company. He aroused enormous patriotic fervor by composing the National Hymn of Central America, and dedicating it to the President of the Republic of Guatemala. He next had a successful season at the Academy of Music in New York, and during the following four years (1910–14) he was General Music Director of the Montreal Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada, successively. During the season of 1914–15 he was principal Italian conductor at the Century Theatre in New York. Thence he joined the Boston National Opera Company which toured the United States in the season of 1915–16. This is Mr. Jacchia's fourth season at the Pops.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

JOHN C. MULLALY

To all those who remember music and the theatre in Boston in the eighties, the name of John C. Mullaly will be familiar. The oldest living member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, his service as violinist from 1885 to 1890, and from 1905 to 1913 is but one aspect of his varied career. Born in Newcastle in 1847 of an Irish father and a Scotch mother, he came to the United States and to Boston as a small boy. As a remarkably talented youth of sixteen, he attracted public attention in the Civil War days, leading Gilmore's Band. In the early Seventies he first became a familiar figure conducting orchestras in the Boston Theatre and in the Globe Theatre, which stood on the corner of Essex and Washington Streets. In these theatres and in the old Music Hall (on Tremont Street) he conducted the finest orchestras, and orchestras of very indifferent ability (from the latter he had a reputation for inspiring remarkable results). He directed everything from "Tannhäuser" or "The Dutchman," with the greatest stars of the day, to a burlesque show, and all the intermediate gradations. He conducted the Pops in their second season (1886), when they ran continuously for four months. For twenty-nine summers he was the idol of Newport as the director of the Casino Orchestra there. But Mr. Mullaly's name is primarily connected with the operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan. When the craze for "Patience," "Iolanthe," "Pinafore," "The Yeomen of the Guard," "The Gondolier" and "Mikado" seized every one, Mr. Mullaly was at the fore of the movement, conducting all of them in many cities. He presided over the first American production of "The Pirates of Penzance" in 1888.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

JOHN C. MULLALY

To all those who remember music and the theatre in Boston in the eighties, the name of John C. Mullaly will be familiar. The oldest living member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, his service as violinist from 1885 to 1890, and from 1905 to 1913 is but one aspect of his varied career. Born in Newcastle in 1847 of an Irish father and a Scotch mother, he came to the United States and to Boston as a small boy. As a remarkably talented youth of sixteen, he attracted public attention in the Civil War days, leading Gilmore's Band. In the early Seventies he first became a familiar figure conducting orchestras in the Boston Theatre and in the Globe Theatre, which stood on the corner of Essex and Washington Streets. In these theatres and in the old Music Hall (on Tremont Street) he conducted the finest orchestras, and orchestras of very indifferent ability (from the latter he had a reputation for inspiring remarkable results). He directed everything from "Tannhäuser" or "The Dutchman," with the greatest stars of the day, to a burlesque show, and all the intermediate gradations. He conducted the Pops in their second season (1886), when they ran continuously for four months. For twenty-nine summers he was the idol of Newport as the director of the Casino Orchestra there. But Mr. Mullaly's name is primarily connected with the operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan. When the craze for "Patience," "Iolanthe," "Pinafore," "The Yeomen of the Guard," "The Gondolier" and "Mikado" seized every one, Mr. Mullaly was at the fore of the movement, conducting all of them in many cities. He presided over the first American production of "The Pirates of Penzance" in 1888.

Enliven Your Socials With Good Music

Provide a wealth of musical merriment for your summer socials or dancing parties. Always have on hand a number of Victor or Edison records from Harvey's, "The Music Center of Boston." Here you may select your favorites from one of the largest record libraries in New England.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

THE EARLY FORTUNES OF "LOHENGRIN"

Wagner completed "Lohengrin" in August, 1847, and when he was declared a political exile after the revolution of the following year, he despaired of having it performed, and laid it aside—reluctantly, we may be certain, for he had put his heart into the characters of Elsa and Lohengrin. He wrote how, while at Paris, "My eye fell on the score of my 'Lohengrin' which I had almost forgotten. A pitiful feeling came over me that these tones would never sound from the deathly pale paper; two words I wrote to Liszt, the answer to which was nothing less than the information that the most elaborate production was planned at the Weimar Opera." This was entirely Liszt's doing, and that master, who was then as famous as Wagner was obscure, directed every rehearsal with a zealot's fidelity. "Of course," he wrote to his friend, "we shall not omit a note or comma of your work, respecting to our utmost ability its immaculate beauty." Liszt was indeed carried away by "this wonderful score," but the daring orchestral coloring made him apprehensive of its success. Wagner characteristically answered, "We must dare," and would have further carried out the maxim by venturing to Weimar in disguise to witness the first performance, had not Liszt's prudence restrained him Afterwards Liszt wrote of the score in the highest rapture, but could truly call it nothing more than a "comparative success." Since it was not given outside of Germany for some years, Wagner had no opportunity to hear "Lohengrin" until his pardon and return to Germany in 1861.

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

MOZART'S "GERMAN DANCES"

Succeeding the Chevalier Gluck in 1787 as Court Composer to the Emperor Joseph II (at a considerably reduced salary, for the Emperor was economical), Mozart was ordered to compose numerous dances for the court balls. Among them was the German Dance which, on account of the bells and post horn in the Trio, is called "The Sleigh Ride." Mozart was indeed an indefatigable dancer, and was also fond of the sleigh processions which were then fashionable in Vienna. "These sledges are richly ornamented," wrote Michael Kelley, the tenor, and friend of Mozart, "and carved with all kinds of monsters, inlaid with burnished gold, etc. Snow is previously scattered all along the course, that their runners may always glide smoothly. The effect at night, by torchlight, is like enchantment. I have seen forty or fifty sledges drawn up, one behind the other; in every sledge was seated a lady, covered with diamonds, bundled in furs and pelisses; behind each was a gentleman, as magnificently dressed, driving. Before every sledge there ran two footmen with long, sliver-knobbed poles. The Hungarian Prince, Dietressteen, the Grand Master of the Horse, was always the leader of the traineaux. The immense velocity with which these things are drawn is perfectly astonishing; they drive for three or four hours, and ultimately draw up before the Emperor's palace. The running footmen have costly liveries, and the horses are caparisoned with rich trappings and large plumes of milk-white feathers—on the whole, a magnificent spectacle indeed."

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

The Test of a Good Book

¶ "The book that delighted us at eighteen, if it be a good book, will delight us much more at twenty-five, and it will prove like a new book to us at thirty years of age. At forty we shall re-read it, wondering why we never saw how beautiful it was before. A great book grows exactly in proportion to the growth of the reader's mind."

VOLGA BARGEMEN'S SONG

On the banks of the Volga before the era of steamboats, the sole occupation of certain peasants was to haul by ropes heavily laden barges from one town to the next. From the exhausting strain of this work spontaneously came this poignant folk-melody. The bargemen make a distant clump of birch-trees the goal of their efforts. The opening and closing syllables accompany the heaving and slackening motion of their labor:—

Ay-ouch-nem! Ay-ouch-nem!
Let us pull—once more, once more!
Ay-ouch-nem! Ay-ouch-nem!
Let us pull—once more, once more!
Look! the birches nearing us,
Curly birch-trees soon we'll pass!
Ai da da, ai da! Ai da da, ai da!
Curly birch trees soon we'll pass!
Ay-ouch-nem! Ay-ouch-nem!

DUBÍNUSHKA (Revolutionary)

Many songs have I heard in my native land, songs of joy and grief;
But of all the songs, only one is engraved on my memory,—this is the song of the workman.
Oh, let us pull the Dubínushka* and down the pile will go; let us pull (one, two)—go!
The wise Englishman, to make his work easier, has invented many machines.
But our Russian peasant is forever pulling his native Dubínushka.
Oh, let us pull the Dubínushka and down the pile will go; let us pull (one, two)—go!
But the time will come when the people will awaken,
Then the peasant will turn his flogged back, and in his native woods will choose the strongest cudgel for his enemies.
Oh, let us pull the Dubínushka and down the pile will go; let us pull (one, two)—go!

* "Dubínushka" is a primitive arrangement for driving stakes, somewhat like a pile-driver, pulled by ropes.

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

Reproducing Piano

Delicious light music of all kinds:

Ballet music	Favorite overtures
Opera selections	Concert waltzes
Popular potpourries	Old songs

All ideally played by the world's best artists — and all this without the single touch of a human hand.

Seated in a comfortable chair in your own home, you may command the greatest artists to play for you. When hearing music in this way one gets nearer its true meaning and one's enjoyment increases the better one understands it.

No music lover should miss hearing the Ampico. May we not show it to you some day soon.

Sweetheart, Do You Remember?

Medium Voice

Lyric by May Stanley Music by Geoffrey O'Hara

One of those tantalizing tunes that are so compounded of rhythm and melody, that upon hearing it you ask, like Oliver Twist, for more! The best song ever written by a composer who only knows how to write successes.
